pass any assessment legislation during the present session excepting to redress the scrap-iron grievance. The. report of the commission will, therefore, be dealt with by the new Parllament. The most radical recommendation:

s the abolition of the personal property tax, and the substitusion of a business tax, a tax on professions and callings, and a house tax. The commissioners express the opinion that these taxes at the minimum rates provided for should produce in the aggregate a larger sum than is produced under the present law by the tax on personal property. It is, therefore, obvious, they say, that as high a rate on real estate as that now imposed would not be necessary. RAILWAY BILLS PASSED.
