Economical Pork Production.

In the past some objections have been raised by the packers re the use of forage plants and roots for pork production, but the light of recent experiments would seem to show their fears or objections groundless; in fact the good influence of a considerable proportion of green feed or roots in the ration of a pig. can scarcely be over estimated. It has long been known that skim milk has a most beneficial influence upon the thrift of the porkers, and quality of the pork, even when the amount fed forms only a smal part of the ration. Green food and roots seem in a large measure to be capable of supplementing the now,-in view of the tremendous expansion in the Canadian bacon industry,-quite inadequate supply of dairy by-products, for use in pig feeding. The farmer whose conditions may permit may go even further than to use forage plants as a supplementary food. He may even make them the chief item of his pig feed if he is careful to use a good proportion of grain, (oats, peus, barley,) during the last month of the feeding period.

As the season is rather far advanced for an exhaustive discussion of forage crops suitable for this purpose, I shall confine my remarks to such as are still Clover.—Probably no crop is better adapted to young pigs than clover, and a bit of clover stubble used for this purpose will give very good returns. So far as our experiments go, the pork so produced is of good quality.

Rape.-Of all the crops used here so far for pasturing pigs, rape quite easily stands first. The principal points in its favor are; (1) its quick growth, (2) its wide range, as it grows well on almost any kind of land, (3) its long season, as it may be sown as late as September and still do fairly well; (4) its evident palatability, as the pigs eat it greedily, (5) its good effect upon the quality of the bacon, producing as it does, almost invariably a good firm earcass. Rape may be expected to be fit for pasturage from 6 to 8 weeks from date of sowing. It should be sown in rows 24 inches a mil, since when so grown it gives the pleatest return per acre, and is best adapted for pasturing. It should be sown faily thickly in the rows, say, three points of seed per acre. An acro may be expected to carry from 20 to 43 pigs through a season, depending on the season and pigs are turned in. Vetches.—Vetches also are valuable as forage for swine, and may be, under exceptional conditions, sown late in season. Especially is this true of the after having been cut off or eaten down.

Artichokes. - Another crop of great value for pork production is the artichoke. It should be sown late in the fall or very early in the spring. The pigs may be allowed to feed on it in October and the early spring They will do the harvesting themselves. This is a most excellent crop for brood sows in spring and autumu.

Almost all varieties of juicy forage crops are suitable for pork production, the sorts mentioned above being probably the best for Canada.

The question as to the advisability of allowing pigs to graze or shutting in a small pen and feeding them the green crops, does not seem to have been positively settled yet, for while greater daily gains may be expected where the animals are kept in close quarters, there is always the item of extra labor for cutting and carrying the forage.

Another item of some importance to the feeder is the comparative economy of Winter and Summer feeding of pigs. According to various experiments conducted here recently, pork may be produced at about $1.00 per hundred pounds, live weight, less cost in summer than in winter. This seems to be due to the less cost of green feed, as well as to the low temperature, which must be overcome by food or artificial
