Roots for Swine.

During the last two or three years a great deal of interest has been taken in the subject of feeding roots to awine. Formerly a prejudice existed against them on account of an idea that their ne was responsible for a considerable ortion of the soft bacon produced in the Canadian packing houses at certain seasons of the year. Careful experiment has shown, however, that roots can be fed in moderate quantities combined with other feed without any injurious effects on the quality of the pork produced. As heavy root crops can be easily and economically grown in nearly all those portions of Canada where swine raising is carried on extensively, the fact that roots can be profitably fed without injury to the hacon, and with positive benefit, as far as the thrift of the animal is concerned becomes of considerable importance to our farmers. Value of Roots.—Eight pounds of mangolds or carrots and about the same weight or a little less of sugar beets are equal in value to one pound of grain. This is the consensus of the Copenhagen. Ottawa, and several American Experiment stations. At Copenhagen the mangolds were fed finely cut and raw, and even when one fourth of the daily feed was given in the form of roots, no injurious effects were noticed in the quality of the pork. The grain per head in ten days on a ration half grain and half whey or milk was 7.6 pounds, whereas when the grain was replaced by roots after the proportion of 1 to 10 the increase was found to be 3.3 lbs. When half the grain was replaced by roots in proportion of 1 to 8 the growth of the different lots was pretty nearly the rather than the total weight or the quantity of sugar contained. lotatoes. - In a number of Danish experiments four of cooked potatoes gave practically the same gain as one pound of grain. The quality of pork produced from potato feed is especially | Coming! Coming! good as has been shown by numerous experiments in England, Ireland, Denmark and Canada. In this con-experimental work here with potatoes seems to indicate that fed raw they are of very little nutritive value, but when cooked they are worth about one-quarter as much as mixed grain." Artichokes have a feeding value similiar to that of potatoes.

Turnips have not been found as satisfactory as mangolds or sugar beets which they are eaten by the pigs. Indeed, no other root seems more satisfactory considering the yield per acre, palatability and feeding value, than the large red mangel. Proportion of Roots to Grain.—The experiments conducted by Prof. Day and Prof. Grisdale and myself, as well as the experience of many of our best farmers indicate that the most economical and satisfactory ration for swine feeding contains equal parts by weight of grain and roots. The addition of about 3 lbs per day of skim milk or whey will go far to insure thrifty growth and fine quality of pork.

> Farmers, Sell to Local Droyers. A couple of slick fellows have been swindling the farmers in Huron County. By paying a few dollars down for live stock at a good price, they get the unsuspecting farmer to sign an agreement to deliver the said article and receive the balance of the big pay. A note is placed surreptitiously underneath the innocent looking paper and the signature appears on both paper and note. They call thems selves the Indiana Cattle Co." Upward of a thousand dollars worth of notes thus secured from farmers were due on the 19th inst., at a Kincardine bank. Sell your stock to local drovers. They will give you the highest market prices and you run no risks.
