Miller's Camp

Miller's camp is still booming. The heavy snow storms lately has stopped the haul down the town line, but Dolph's old reliables are busy hauling cedar to Mr. Winlaw's shingle mill to be manufactured into shingles,

George, with his old team, is piling up the logs on the skid, keeping Campbell and George busy, who have charge of the cutting.

Will gets around some. He has charge of the loading.

R. F. has been staying with us the most of the week. He seems to be pleased with the way work is progress-

Mr. Winlaw, the shingle king of the country, visited here last week.

The Harkaway correspondent should correct his error next week, as one of Dolph's old reliables is not off the route; they are making their regular trips, and look as though they would for some time yet. I do not think they would look thin if I understood how to raise a fifteen dollar cheque to twenty-five to buy more oats. What do you think, John. We do not know that Joe left because the skidding did not agree with him, but we do know why he left the firm for lots 8 and 9, Harvey and Elgin the Harkaway, writer mentions, and was filled to the door. The pastor, key. with the powers provided by law, up to the Rev. J. Hunter, of Markdule, was Thos. Leonard occupied the chair, and present and delivered a very appropriate address to the children. Mr. R. Winlaw was present with his phonograph and delighted the audience at intervals with some choice selections. The singing by the choir and by the children of the school was first-class. Miss Driukwater gave a selection on the organ and received a hearty encore. There were several recitations one by Miss Sadie Duncan is deserving of special mention. Much credit for the success of the entertainment is due to Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Marshall, Ralph Purvis and others who assisted the committee in getting up the entertainment which taken attogether was one of the best ever held in
