Mr. Robt. C. McNally Waited Upon and Presented With Gifts and an Address.

On Monday evening last a number of the friends and associates of Mr. R. C. McNally assembled in the council chamber and presented him with the following address and presentation, to which he graciously responded:

To ROBERT C. McNALLY, Esq. Prior to your leaving Markdale, a few of your friends have embraced this opportunity of testifying to your intrinsic worth as a friend, a business man and citizen.

We have always admired your ceaseless industry, your unflinching courtesy, your cheery smile and your warm handshake.

You have filled your place, and filled it well, whether it was in the ball game, or in any other enterprise which had for its object the advancement of our town. Furthermore, what we confess is sometimes forgotten in the hurry and bustle of this world, you have not neglected to do your share in the more serious walks of life.

Your church has always counted upon the use of your talent, and has never called in vain.

In fact we see in you an example of a well rounded character. And after all it is character that counts in this world. A character that is sound, that rings as the perfect bell does, is the character we must have if we would rank well among men and make the most of life.

We can not conceal the flattery, and any attempt to do so will be readily detected.

We have admired your manly, Christian character, and point at it as an example worthy of emulation.

In conclusion we would ask you to accept this set of military brushes, and these field glasses, with the wish that each time they may be used they will act as a reminder of your Markdale friends, every one of whom wish you success in your new surroundings.

Signed, "The Boys." Markdale, April 11, 1904.

R. C. left on Tuesday for Owen Sound, where he will make his home. The address very accurately betrays Mr. McNally's character, and nothing remains to be said, except the expression of the wish that the change may bring in its train all the hopes and aspirations Mr. McNally pictures in it for himself.

The Standard joins his many friends in wishing him well.

Muttum in Parvo. A brief but comprehensive description of Markdale, over two hundred words, neatly printed on good envelopes for sale at this office at ten cents a pkg. of 25, or two packages for fifteen cents. These are just the thing for use when writing to those who might be interested in the whereabouts and leading features of Markdale. Every family should have them. They contain much in little.

Water, Frost and Rats. The earth is so thoroughly saturated this spring that cellars are affected which were never before known to have been troubled with water. Those who are about to have houses erected should profit by this experience and have their basement walls built of cement concrete instead of stone masonry. The cement is water-proof, frost proof, and vermin proof, three very important characteristics. A cement concrete wall ten inches thick is quite sufficient for any ordinary building, and with a cement floor you can defy water, frost or rats. Down South in Alabama.

Mr. J. E. Paterson, late book-keeper in McFarland, Stafford & Co.'s mercantile establishment, is now bossing a gang of thirteen darkies at Mobile, Ala. His uncle is manager of The Alabama Elastic Plaster Co. This plaster is made from wood pulp, — no sand or lime, — and is used on walls and ceilings of homes. The temperature is high and J. E. finds it a difficult task to keep the colored gents at work so as to be able at the end of the week to report a satisfactory output for the time. It's worth something, however, to be boss, and The Standard wishes its esteemed young friend success down south in Alabama.

Giving Up Business. H. H. Benson & Co., announce this week a clearing sale of general merchandise for 90 days preparatory to giving up business in Markdale. They have sold their real estate to Mr. James Kelly of the Revere Hotel and are taking steps to wind up in about three months. The Benson Brothers have been in business here since they were boys, in fact, grew up with the place, and no more familiar figures are in town than they. Their characteristic industry and stick-to-itiveness, with geniality has brought success in business. Mr. W. J. Benson leaves for the West on a business and prospecting trip shortly but as to future arrangements for locating we cannot yet speak definitely.

Mrs. K. Sproule's Millinery. At Mrs. Sproule's Spring millinery opening many elegant models were shown, exhibiting much fine workmanship. As to colors this season champagne is still very much in vogue, shading from the pale tuscany to the deep amber. Reseda green is shown extensively but is closely rivaled by a new shade known as "petunia." In trimmings many dainty designs are shown, especially in white and gold. Small French flowers, shaded foliage and fruit are also much worn. A particularly striking model was a large black picture hat. The shape flared high on one side, with the new scalloped brim, the top being made of alternate rows of silk mohair braid and box-plaited valencienne lace. The facing was of shirred black chiffon with petal sequin medallions. A large plume was laid flat on the upturned brim while another came from the back and hanging gracefully over the left side. Long black chiffon ties caught with a sequin bar completed this picturesque hat. A hat that received much admiration, was of the torpede shape, a combination of white silk "crepe de Lisse" and gold passementerie. It was simply trimmed with shirred rosettes of white "Duchess" ribbon and strappings, caught with small gold buttons. A feather cigarette at side front completed a hat noticeable for its smart originality. Many smart ready-to-wear were in evidence, some showing the new oblong crown. A decided novelty is the plaid straw, while reds, browns and navy blues are much used in trimmings.

Spring Millinery

Pretty Rooms, Pretty Hats and Competent Milliners as Heretofore.—What Will be Worn This Season.

It seems to us that attempt to describe the millinery openings in such a way as to give an adequate conception of what Dame Fashion, with the assistance of the fairy fingers of our local milliners, has placed in store for the connoisseurs of the latest styles and shades in ladies' headgear, would be vain and presumptuous on our part. So, therefore, we shall content ourselves in trying to place before you some of the ideas which came to us as we stood amazed at what might be called enchantment halls, and in our bewilderment, catching only about half what the patient milliners said to us, as they strove to explain what would be worn this season.

To use the words of the patent medicine orator—quite true, however, of course, why certainly in this connection—everything is simply adorable this spring. Not a yard wide, a yard strong, warranted not to rip, ravel and all the rest—but every one a dream of artistic hat beauty—every one individual and unique in style and finish, and material. That's how one can best describe the hat openings at Mrs. Sproule's, McFarland, Stafford & Co.'s and F. T. Hill & Co.'s. Miss Nettleton, of Collingwood, is in charge at Mrs. Sproule's; Miss Thompson, of Orangeville, at McFarland, Stafford & Co.'s, and Miss Stein at Hill's.

For many years a representative of The Standard has visited the local millinery emporiums twice a year, and told with all the eloquence in his power how "awfully" stunning everything was from the gorgeous and massive trimmed hat to the saucy ready-to-wear, and how unutterably charming were the milliners from the bosses down to the demure little maidens who came to learn the job. We might go on again and tell how those magnificent show-rooms looked last week on opening days, when everything was so bright in the surroundings that even the dullest of us could find something new and interesting to write about. Some person, however, has hinted to us that brevity is the soul of wit, so we will take his advice this year and ring off.

There is little change in the general line of hats this season. The shapes are either large or small in most cases. There are few half-way hats in regard to size: The crowns on all hats, whether large or small, are large. Sometimes these crowns are oval, pointed, boat-shaped, or round, or diamond, but no matter what the shape, they are large and flat. Brims are elaborately trimmed. Coarse braids are worn on in a fancy manner. Materials show transparent stuffs, leading with taffetas. Velvets, net and lace are in evidence. One of the season's most marked features is the touch of gold that appears in the fancy silks and other braids. The preference in using flowers is almost entirely for the small flowers in clusters and wreaths. Clusters of fruits are also much worn. Blue, red, brown, champagne white and black are the predominating shades. Crowns are decorated in a flat style, and underlimes elaborated. In shapes the Cavalier, the Continental, the Torpede turban, and the Marquise are among the best models. The tricorne is seen in varied ideas, and is usually military in effect, with brass buttons.

The Sun Cement Company of Owen Sound is to change its system of manufacture from the dry to the "slurry" system forthwith. The latter is proving the more profitable way.
