Surrender Complete.

The Second Anniversary of Restoration of Peace in South

Two years ago the empire rejoiced in the restoration of peace after the long. memorable and trying South African campaign, For nearly three years previously the bloody conflict had been raging and thousands on each side laid down their lives for the cause in which they had unsheathed the sword. Incited by the words of an ambitious old man and his followers the flower of the man and his followers the flower of the manhood of the two Boer republics on road near lot 24, con. 14, was inmassed themselves on the borders of British territory and crossing began tion of the two countries to British reeve. - Carried. dominions. During the campaign the pick of British troops encountered disaster after disaster but unflinchingly kept on until they had learned the hard lessons that ultimately won for them the victory. But long and bitter as had been the war both sides magnanimously dropped their feuds when Kitchener's last dispatch "Surrender complete," vibrated on the wire that carried it to the throbbing heart of the carried it to the throbbing heart of the be haid $2.00 for committee work reempire's capital and caused a deep sigh Gilbert Isaacs' complaint.—Carried, of relief to rise from the millions of patient hearts throughout the empire.
