the illustrated post card, has died at Nuremberg, Germany, worth a large fortune. It was in March. 1872, when he was a poor artist, he brought out his first volume of post-cards, which was published at Zurich. These cards were reproductions of Borich's sketches, and at once became popular. The briginal cards were sold at four cents each, and orders began to flow in from all parts of Europe. Borlch then engaged expert photographers to visit the chief towns in Switzerland and take the most interesting views, and this was the beginning of new "industry."

Hungary has produced an infant prodigy in music. He is a boy of less than ten, named Franz von Vecsey, and has already accomplished. wonderful things. At two years of ige he initiated the violin with a piece of wood and a stick, as lesser prodigies have sometimes done. At four he song from ear the most complicated violin compositions, which could neither play nor read, had ssons at six, and at eight went to the Budy-Pesth Conservatoire, where he literally romped through the ourse under Hubay.
