An Accomplishment.

Housekeeping is an accomplishment in comparison to which, in its bearing on woman's relation to real life and to the family, all others are trivial. It comprehends all that goes to make up a well-ordered home, where the sweet est relations of life rest on firm foundations, and the purest sentiments thrive. It is an accomplishment that may be acquired by study and experiment, but the young and inexperienced Advance. housekeeper generally reaches success only through great tribulation. It ought to be absorbed in girlhood. If girls were taught to take as much genuine pride in dusting a room well, or broiling a steak to a nicety, as they felt when they have mastered one of Durham. Beethoven's grand symphonies, there would be fewer complaining husbands and unhappy wives. The great lesson to learn is that work well done is robbed of its curse. The woman who is satisfied only with the highest perfection in her work, drops the drudge and becomes the artist. There is no dignity in slighted work; but to the artist, no matter how humble his calling, belongs the honor which is inseparable from all man's struggles after perfection. No mother who has the happiness of her daughter at heart will neglect to teach her first the duties of the household; and no daughter who desires to be queen at home and in her circle of friends, can afford to remain gnorant of the smallest details that contribute to the comfort, the peace, and the attractiveness of home. There is no luck in housekeeping, however it may seem, Everything works by exact rule, and even with thorough knowledge, eternal vigilance is success. There must be a place for everything and everything in its place, a time for everything and everything in its time. Your husband may admire your grace and ease in society, your wit, your school-day accomplishments of music and painting, but all in perfection will not atone for an ill-ordered kitchen. sour bread, muddy coffee, tough meats, unpalatable vegetables, indigestible pastry, and the whole train of horrors that result from bad housekeeping; on the other hand, success wins gratitude. adds lustre to the most brilliant intel-
