AWFUL RAILWAY WRECK

At Least Twenty-five People Were Killed.
A Harrisburg, Penn., dispatch says: At least twenty-five persons were killed, many being burned to death, and more than one hundred injured in a collision on the Pennsylvania Railroad, south of Harrisburg, a few minutes before 2 o'clock on Thursday morning. The train was carrying a heavy load of coal. The engine was derailed, and the train was wrecked. The passengers were scattered over a wide area.

Among the injured were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith, who were on their way to Pittsburgh from New York. It is officially estimated that the total loss will amount to $1,000,000. This includes $150,000 for each of the passengers and other persons who were injured.

NEWSPAPER MAN'S STORY.
The first intimation I had of the wreck was from a newspaper man, who was on the train. He said that the train was derailed, and that the engine was derailed. He said that the train was wrecked, and that the passengers were scattered over a wide area.

When I heard an awful crash, I was thrown out of the aisle of the car. I was dazed for a time, and only realized my position and that I had been injured when I felt a woman grabbing me, and separating me from the wreckage. I pushed her out of the window, and a fellow-passenger handed out a child which belonged to her. He then left the train, and called to me to jump through the window. Just then there was a terrific explosion. As I dropped to the ground a missile struck me and knocked me down. I don't know how long I lay there, but when I recovered my senses I crawled across the tracks under a freight train and rolled down the embankment on the other side. I was in my night clothes, and all my other clothing and belongings were lost.

I never want to witness such a sight as that which followed the collision. Women were screaming, children were crying, and strong men were wandering about dazed and helpless. The tracks were strewn in all directions with half-paked men and women, some of whom were dead and others seriously injured.

When the boiler of the passenger engine blew up, the engine was instantly killed.

GORED TO DEATH.

A Madrid dispatch says: While a show of little girls were playing in the fields at Villanueva, Seville, imitating a religious procession, and waving their handkerchiefs like banners, which charged them. The children were tossed, trampled upon and gored. Nine of them were killed and six badly injured. The drovers were not called arrested, which prevented the rescue of the children. The children were gored to death by the horns of the oxen.

ONE HUNDRED KILLED.

Tornado Wipes Out Town of Snyder, Oklahoma.

A Guthrie, Okla., dispatch says: Snyder, a thriving town of 1,000 persons, situated in the heart of the rich Kiowa farming country, open to white settlement in 1901, was practically wiped out of existence by a conflagration that struck that place on Wednesday night.

The death list will probably exceed 100 persons. Eighty-five bodies have been recovered. A dozen persons are missing and given up for dead, and the forty-one seriously wounded severely are likely to die. More than one hundred other persons suffered less severe injuries.

The storm was of the regular variety and swooped down upon Snyder without warning. It cut a swath a half mile wide, demolishing everything in its path for a distance of ten miles southwest and three miles northeast of Snyder.

"THE WORK OF RELIEF."
The first news of the storm was received about midnight. Soon thereafter, before any details had been received, telegraph and telephone wires were down. Immediately relief trains were ordered out from all available points, starting from Hobart, Chickasaw, I. T., Guthrie, Oklahoma City, and other towns. Every train carried doctors, nurses and any person capable of rendering aid. The first relief train, sent from Hobart, 132 miles north of Snyder, reached the stricken town just before daylight. Everyone on board began at once the work of relief. On every hand they found wreckage and streets almost obliterated by piles of demolished houses. In all directions evidence of the terrible havoc of the storm was apparent. The dead and dying lay about the streets, in yards and mixed up with the wreckage, while those who escaped ran hither and thither in excited attempts to bring order out of the terrible chaos, and to render what meagre aid they might.

MEN TO DIG GRAVES.
Oklahoma City on Thursday sent one hundred men to dig graves and seek the dead still in the ruins, and a dozen undertakers with one hundred coffins. Offers of financial assistance have come from numerous sources to aid in the general confusion and distress, after the tornado had passed first broke out and burned up all that remained of the buildings in one of the business blocks. No farther has it been possible to find out whether any bodies were cremated.

MANY WOUNDED WILL DIE.
The Mayor of Snyder is having much trouble arranging for the burial of the dead. The confusion is great, owing to the fact that there are many unidentified bodies all the morgues. There is much suffering owing to lack of provisions and places to stay. What houses remain in the town are unsafe for habitation. The York of Hobart, who was active in relieving the suffering, is nearly per cent. of the wounded will die.

WHAT RAILWAYS ARE DOING.
Methods of Special Assistance to Agricultural Development.

Next, the governments of the country are probably no corporate interests so much interested in the country's prosperity and development as the Transportation Companies, and especially in this true when these companies hold large land grants.

An investigation of the development policy of over eight of the more important railways reveals the fact that a great deal of quiet and effective work for the encouragement of agriculture and stock raising is being done by most of these great corporations.

Nearly all the roads are active in securing immigration for their territory and in heating industrial enterprises. To this end, they either have a special Industrial Commission or some one of their general officers gives his attention to the subject, and when it comes to the encouragement of agriculture the following are the figures:

Twenty-nine railways give active assistance to the marketing of products grown along their lands; eight employ special agricultural agents; thirty-one cooperate with the State colleges and experiment stations in aiding agricultural education; twelve encourage and improvement; ten promote agricultural conventions; six run special educational trains; three introduce pure-bred stock; five own demonstration farms; nine plant and distribute bulletins; two run a pick-up car service; six give special rates to encourage stock raising; four subscribe for and distribute agricultural papers.

Such is the record of the railways of the United States. Our Canadian railways have, as almost every one knows, done an immense amount of advertising for Canada and some of them have done much to assist in practical agricultural development.

The Government, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Cabinet, and Mr. Whitney and Callaghan were invited to be present at the time of the vote.

AN EXCHANGE OF QUARTERS.
Before the Suez Canal was opened, it was a frequent port of call for English ships bound for India, and the British flag followed this custom, which was caused by the need of pitiable supplies for the long voyage, the ship returning to England from India (touching at the island, and being there night at Jamstown at the house of Mr. Balcanal.

Ten years after Napoleon Bonaparte landed to begin his nearly six years of dreary exile, and was assigned to the same room which his captor at Waterloo had occupied. This strange coincidence came to the knowledge of the duke at Paris during his occupation by the allied troops, and he wrote the following letter to Admiral Mahan, then commanding at St. Helena.

Paris, April 3, 1816.
My Dear Malcolm,
I am very much obliged to you for Mr. Simpson's book, which I will read when I have a moment's leisure. I am glad you have taken the command at St. Helena upon which I congratulate you. I trust never to be able to see you again. You may tell "Bony" that I and his apartments at the Elisee Bourbon were very convenient, and that I hope he likes mine at Mr. Balcanal's. It is a dull sequel, enough to the affairs of Europe that we should change places of residence.
I am yours most sincerely,
WELLINGTON.
