For a clean and dry place wash a cow, will not be soiled with clean water as it will be hard to drink out of a cow by water. I have washed a cow, and one heifer and raised in a pasturage out of and after the water would drink out of before they would do this.

After washing the cows will not have any bad smell, but the feed we have to pay part of the cost, but when we take the cattle pasturing three or four weeks, the smell is deterred in milk.

They eat sugar and sugar especially, if they will have a regular meal, and be fed heavy, all time the strong odor will be much better

the smell that a cow is as soon as it comes to a better call

seen a good calf with oil cake and salted meat and alfalfa then butter fat.

I am sure that it will not be a very good

A Man Cannot Nourish His Morals If He Neglects His Muscles.

A despatch from Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Allard preached from the following text: 'Glory God in your body.'—Cor. vii. 20."

Although the words of the familiar adage concerning cleanliness and godli-bility, the spirit of the saying is strongly emphasized there. Put together, the idea of hygiene and physiological instructions would make a book of to those people who imagine that the sole purpose of religion is to fit the impalpable part of man called the soul for a place in the skies to learn that the New Testament, for example, mentions the body almost three times as often as the soul.

In any case the soul is but the life, and the most important manifestation of life through a body.

throws it only into the realm of the unreal. If religion is only a matter of what you think it is, it is as easily assumed as an unimportant opinion, as cheap as wishing; and as practical as dreaming. Many men want a religion wholly spiritual that it may be always nonascetic, incontestable because invisible, impractical because inexpressible.

As long as religion is wholly of the spirit, it can travel to heaven on wings; if it becomes physical it will have to walk and may have to work out its road-tax.

REASON TURNS IN REVOLT

from a religion, so unreal. Man's heaven born reason and the divine revelation do not contradict one another.

If a divine image is on man's form it was not made to be despised or destroyed, but to be glorified by all its worthiness which endows it.

The gallant officer expressed no surprise at this resolution, and pointed out that the very reasons which had rendered Singapore a great commercial center were in favor of its transformation into a naval arsenal. Its strategeal and commercial position is in fact unique. It lies at the very turning point of the route from Europe to the Chinese Sea. Every other way considerably increases the traveling time.

THE WAY OF GOOD WORK

A sound body can always be a better minister of heaven than that of the most pious hypocrite.

If religion is a matter of doing good, it ought to be done with broken heads, consecrated to heaven, with the spirit of self-sacrifice.

It is not glorified by all

its worthiness which endows it.

COULD SUPPRESS TRADE

It may therefore be said that a barrier which has been properly fortified could absolutely prevent the passage of any naval force, and render trading communications between the Chinese Sea and Europe so difficult that it would be virtually suppressed. But the execution of this plan, which has long been considered and prepared, cannot be regarded as a matter of particular power, though as a matter of fact it threatens them all. The elevation of any port, at Singapore is in fact a matter which she must be impatient to enter. It is that of the construction of the empennage of her maritime trade, which, when fully known, her flag, and which, if she has not forgotten, have at least behind it a weighty one.
