STORY OF A BIG SWINDLE

THROUGH THE AMERICAN CUSTOMS AT NEW YORK.

pieces Has a Novel Method

In the Paris Matin M. Hardouin, a known writer and financial authorgoodwink the New York customs authorities, which he says was carried out: who can turn out Rembrandts better than Rembrandt himself. Several disgive orders for these "Dutch" masterpieces. At the bottom of the cunvasses the name of Rembrandt is placed. Ordinarily the dealer sells these. But t occurred to one of them last summer that there was something better to do with them.. These are good, he said to the ragged painter who brought place of that of Rembrandt. Why give n the credit, eh?': The artist carried off the canvases, painted out the false name and put his own in place of it Then he took them back, and the dealer WARNS THE CUSTOMS.

"After a few weeks the dealer sent the pictures to his correspondent in New York, and at the same time sent a letter to the customs authorities there, telling tims of a tremendous fraud. Two real Rembrandt pictures, recently discovered. name of Rembrandt painted out" and another insignificant naine substituted 'Take off the upper coat of paint in the right hand lower corner and you will find that the name of Rembrand is masterpieces in the United States after they have passed your administration. warn you that each painting is worth at 'least $120,000. PAYS THE DUTY.

"This advice did not fall into uneager ears. The outer coat was taken off, and sure enough, there was the name 'Rem-brandt,' with the proper date. The customs people demanded $25,000 for the him away, to safety. We did not two paintings, a sum paid contritely by the correspondent, who feigned great thankfulness for being let off for that amount. But a fortnight later he sold the pictures for nearly $120,000, their authenticity being properly established by the receipts of the American custom house.. They had cost $20 apiece in Varis."
