Special Train from Markdale Jumped Track at Caledon 7 Killed, 90 Injured

Terrible Accident Tuesday Morning on C.P.R. Train bound for Toronto Exhibition—Ninety-One Boarded Train at Markdale.—Mr. W. A. Armstrong, of Armstrong Bros., among the Killed.—Many Markdale People Injured.—A Partial List.

The message on Tuesday that the excursion train to Toronto, Ontario, which left Markdale at 11:30 a.m. on Tuesday morning, having on board about 100 passengers, was thrown from the track while descending the mountain at Caledon, and a number were killed and injured. The anxiety of the friends of those who left on the ill-fated train began to increase. From the first receipt of the news people were trying to find out the details of the accident and to endeavor to secure information regarding the safety of their loved ones. The station was besieged by anxious callers, but nothing definite had been learned. Had news of any nature been received, it was expected that it would be filled with details of the accident. Conflicting reports of the accident arrived, and it was not until the afternoon that a reliable report was received giving the details of the accident. The train was in charge of conductor Matt Grimes, engineer Hogg and fireman Ross, was scheduled to leave Markdale at 11:30, but delays at the station were not till 7:35 that it started out of Markdale station. At Orangeville it was delayed for some time. The seven coaches that were on the special were filled with passengers. This brief delay at Orangeville was the cause of the accident. Stories by the Survivors

A passenger that was on the ill-fated train, told The Standard as follows: "After leaving Orangeville I noticed speed too high and car swaying more than usual; then again as we approached the mountain I felt alarmed at the speed we were going and was in the act of telling my fellow-passenger that we could never take that curve at that rate of speed, when the crash came. The cars turned completely over into the ditch and we were dragged a distance of four rods before we came to a standstill. That space of time seemed an eternity. All was in darkness for a short while. I was in bottom of the car, but we managed to shove our way through a window in the top, and through this a number were taken. The cars which left the track were an indescribable mass of wreckage and the sight left an impression which will never be forgotten. As soon as we were released, all that were able did their utmost to assist others who were pinned beneath the wreckage, and one after another was carried out and laid on the ground. The greatest wonder is that many more were not killed outright."

Postmaster Plewes was among those who had a miraculous escape. He noticed the terrific speed at which they were going and was almost in the act of pulling the rope when the crash came. He was thrown about six feet and when the car stopped he found himself in the bottom of the car with his head under a seat. He pulled himself out but was not injured, save a slight injury on the back of the head.

Mr. Geo. E. Gray, of the Markdale House, was among the passengers on the ill-fated train and came out of the wreck with three broken ribs and a number of other bruises. He was thrown a number of feet and landed under a mass of broken car seats and other debris. He received a severe Indescribable Confusion When Crash Came.—Cars Piled in An Inextricable Mass.—A Heart-Rending Scene.

Mr. Herbert J. Armstrong, who received severe injuries to the back, and a scalp wound, was removed to his home and on Wednesday evening granted The Standard the following interview which vividly describes the entire situation. Mr. Armstrong said: "When we were going around a sharp curve near Orangeville the speed was very high, the car seemed to be on one side, and a great many passengers feared it was going over. I was in third coach, about two-thirds from back end of car. Charlie Armstrong and George Knox occupied seats immediately behind myself, while my brother William and son Harold were in the seat behind them. A gentleman from New Jersey was occupying seat with myself. The car was swaying very much above the average, and after we left Caledon I made the remark to my friend that we would soon approach a curve which would be an interesting run at that speed, but we commenced to descend mountain without any apparent slackening of speed. The train kept the rails until nearing the top of the Horseshoe, when a rail and bar were washed across the ditch into the field and we found ourselves being ground beneath a mass of truck wheels, broken and twisted iron, car seats and other debris. The wheels on the inner rail of curve must have risen off the track and lifted higher and higher as we rounded the curve. The car was in turned completely over on its side, also the first one at that point. The engine and van and first coach left the track, the second car remained on the rails as did also the last three coaches of the train. The passengers all seemed to reach out for the narrow spaces, I went down on the side of the car which was next the ground. All was in darkness which was mostly due to the dust. Glass and timbers were crashing at a terrific rate. We were trapped in that position several car lengths, which seemed to take hours, when we finally came to a dead stop. For a second all seemed still, then the confusion that followed was indescribable. I found myself under the floor of the car which had turned completely over us, the superstructure all being broken away. I immediately tried to release myself and did with very little effort and crawled out of the narrow spaces. I saw Charlie Armstrong and George Alton doing the same. We at once realized the seriousness of the disaster and looked around for traces of our fellow-passengers. I saw Harold Armstrong with his head from under the car and his feet caught; we then noticed William's ankle where it had crumpled over. We went to his assistance but found exit almost impossible. He was pinned beneath the wreckage on all sides and it was with difficulty he was released. He expired about two minutes after, never regaining consciousness. The other passengers were working like Trojans releasing the dead and injured. Five corpses were taken out at once. The sight was a gruesome one, women, men and children crying and begging to be released. The third coach was mostly filled with Markdale people, and by these most of the injuries were sustained. Some of the dead trucks were found on the other side of the track, to that on which the cars were lying, giving an idea of the immense force of the impact. All the immediate attention that the company could give was bestowed on the injured."

A singular fact was that Markdale's four implement dealers, Messrs. Frank Graham, Wm. Brodie, Albert Jackson and J. W. Knott were on the train and were all more or less seriously injured.

Mr. Thos. Taylor was one of those who boarded the train at Markdale, but becoming alarmed at the terrific speed at which they were travelling, got out at Dundalk, and thus escaped the disaster. They were travelling between 50 and 60 miles an hour between here and Dundalk.

Accompanied by his bride, Robert Conn, of Heathcote, boarded the "lucky" train at Markdale, intending to spend a honeymoon in Toronto. The couple were seated in the second car. Mr. Conn was badly bruised about the legs, and his head was cut. His wife was more unfortunate. She was pinned down in the woodwork of the car. Both her shoulders and feet were held tightly as in a vice, and it was only by cutting away the timbers that the rescuers were able to release her. She was at first thought to be fatally injured, but it is believed that she will recover, although she cannot be removed to her home for a week. Mr. Conn and his wife were seated opposite Mr. Armstrong, of Markdale, who was killed.

The cause of the accident is attributed to too-fast running. It is said the train was running at the rate of sixty miles an hour when it struck the curve.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Douglass of Markdale were among those most seriously injured. Mr. Douglass was taken to the Hospital at Toronto, and Mrs. Douglass to Orangeville.

The terrible accident has cast a gloom over the whole neighborhood. On Tuesday business was practically suspended in town, and anxious crowds thronged the station waiting for information of the catastrophe.

The bodies of Mr. W. A. Armstrong and Mr. John Thurston were brought to Markdale Tuesday night. Mr. Thurston's body was taken to Walters Falls on Wednesday morning. The O.P.R. ran a special train in the afternoon from the scene of the accident to Markdale. This brought home the wounded, and arrived in Markdale about four o'clock.

Markdale Wins in a Walk.

Lacrosse Team Defeats Meaford in a Sudden Death Semi-Final Game by a Score of 16 to 5.

The lacrosse team of this place are evidently out for the championship and with fair prospects of success. On Monday they met and defeated the Meaford team, champions of two districts, at Balm Beach, Owen Sound, in a sudden death semi-final game by the overwhelming score of 16 to 5. The half time score was 10 to 5. The half time score was 10 to 5, which exactly represents the game. Some doubt was felt here as to the possibility of Markdale pulling out a victory, but because the Meaford aggregation were heralded as being a pretty fast team. However, they were over-estimated and all minds were set at rest before the first quarter was played. The Markdale team worked systematically and like chain lightning and showed a combination that made the large crowd wonder. The defence, referee Wagborne says, is about the strongest in the Ontario league, and might also state right here that in conversation with the referee after the game, he said that the team that beats Markdale will win the championship. The team work of the locals was a delight to their supporters. They had speed and combination to burn, and played their usual snappy game. In the first half there was nothing to it. The Meaford team was out of their element, and the Meaford supporters could not help but admit that their team was outclassed. In the last stages of the game the Meaford players, seeing that it was a hopeless fight, resorted to the despicable rough house tactics and earned no favour from the big crowd. It would be unfair for us to mention the stellar work of any one of the winning players in particular, as their teaming was not a weak spot on the team. The defence cleared and fed the field, the field fed the home and the home certainly did their part. The line-up of Markdale: Goal, C. Mercer; point, D. Mercer; defence point, C. Hackett; defence field, C. Alton, E. Truck, B. Sewell; centre, C. King; home field, J. Kelly, W. Burnside, H. Lucas outside home, M. Kelly; inside home, C. Kearns. Field captain, G. Dundas.

Markdale's next game will be at Orangeville on Tuesday, September 10th, when they go up against the strong Guelph team in a sudden death semi-final game. A special train will likely be run from here.

The Rev. J. C. Wilson will conduct the services in the Methodist church on Sunday next. Subjects: Morning, "The Resurrection," Evening, "Hailing in the Church Pearly."
