ATOP THE FREIGHT TRAIN.

Walking the Cars a Hair Raising Experience For a Novice.

There came over me as I sat in the caboose that evening a wild desire to ride with the engineer in the cab. I linning to slip ahead along the half mile or so of train at the first stop, I made known my desire to our conauctor over that part of the run:

"They'll be glad to see you." he told "You won't have any trouble getin there. 'It's a mild evenin'." He swung open the window of the lookout and called to his rear brakeman; "Jimmie, vun along with this here party." Jimmie pulled me through the window f the lookout before I clearly realized the entire plan.

It was a slippery path over the roofs of slaty cars to the big engine that was pulling us, and the wind that swept in from the shores of the icebound lake, along which the tracks ran or many miles, snapped sharply over those car roofs. Jimmie hung on to. his lantern with one hand, to his convoy with the other. Long miles over those slippery car roofs had taught him to regard it as no very serious

"This ain't nothin'," was his assurnce. "It sometimes gets nasty when we get down to zero an' a blizzard omes a-rippin from off over the lake. Sometimes you have to get down an' rawl on all fours. It wouldn't be, much fun to be swept of the tops of

There was no disputing that, nor that the three lengthwise planks at the gable of the car roofs were not wide prontemides. You jump from one to another to cross from car to car, and a man has got to have something of a gymnastic training and some cir us as well as railroad blood in his veins to do it many times without dropping into one of the hideous dark abysses between them

A hand out of the dark slapped me in the face. "Drop," said Jimmie, and. fearing possibly that I might not obey. he pulled me flat down upon the car

"That was a 'telltale,'" be explained, and before I could ask further we were in a short reach of a tunnel, and understood. We were whirled through that tunnel like a package in a tube, and if we had raised our arms we could have touched the flying roof of the bore: The smoke lay heavy in the place. It filled our eyes and nos-

"Not real nice," said Jimmie cheerily. But no danger in the holes, save now and then an icicle gets a crack at your nut. You see, there ain't much use in arguin' the matter after that 'telltale' strikes you.'-Edward Hungerford in PARIS RAGPICKERS...

An Occupation That Is Passed Along From Father to Son.

The ragpickers of Paris are born to in work, the occupation being pass ed from father to son for generations. Each ragpicker family has its own district, which is inherited by the chil-dren and grandchildren.

In spite of all the progress made in modern and elegant Paris barrels of waste are piled up on the streets in front of many buildings on beautiful boulevards in the early morning hours, and it is the privilege and in fact the mission of the ragpickers to examine this refuse.

They have use for everything, and but liftle is left after they have passed, their thoroughness being one reason why the system is still allowed. Every scrap of paper has its market; rags are gathered for paper manufacturers; shoes go back to eather deal-

Old sardine and preserved meat tins are used for making playthings, old bones produce gelatip and glue, lemons and orange peels are greatly sought after and sold at the rate of a cent a pound to perfume and sirup manufacturers, old metals are highly prized, cigar stubs go to tobacco factories, and even stale vegetables are carted away.

The quarters of the ragplokers of Paris are just outside the confines of the city-sections carefully avoided by most people who do not belong to the guild. Every member of the family; from the oldest to the three-year-old, takes part in the sorting of the spoils, and it often happens that members of family die either from poisoning from stale food or from a cut from ne of the tins.-Popular Mechanics.

"A Nine Days' Wonder."

The memorable reign of Lady Jane irey is said to have given rise to the phrase "A nine days" wonder." Lady lane was proclaimed queen of England July 10, 1553, four days after the death of Edward VI. After the lapse of a period of nine days, on July 19, soo relinquished her title to the crown, thas terminating her reign in the short space of a week and a half. A noted English historian says. "Thus we come to the end of the diary of that short and troubled reign that from its rength is said to have given rise to the. uow (1620) popular phrase, 'A nine days' wonder."

THE EARLY STAGE.

Boys In Female Parts and the Firs English Actress.

long since a critic, noticing the advent of a new Ophelia in London, observed that, while the actress acquitted herself very well, she could hardly be considered "Shakespeare's Ophelia." which was undoubtedly the case, inasmuch as Shakespeare's Ophelia was a boy, either a chorister or a page in the service of one of the theater's patrons.

No English actress made her appearance before the restoration. On Jan. 3 Pepys records, "To the theater, where ncted the Beggar's Bush,' it being very well done, and here the first time that ever I saw women tpon the stage."

the Dogs Offi the Scent and Saved Her Fawn. The following anecdote is related by I X. Raspail. It is worthy of comparison with the most remarkable of nstances of the same kind:

The author one day perceived a doe n full flight before two dogs in the A gle woods that form a part of the orest of Chantilly. The doe was accompanied by a very young fawn, which appeared quite exhaused and roldy to drop. The mother, doubtless well aware of this, slackened her pace and presently stopped close to some thick bramble bushes. She remained some time there with lowered head as if a walting the onset of her pursuers.

Suddenly an idea seemed to strike her, and with a butt of the head she tossed her fawn right into the middle of the thicket. Then, first, advancing gently as if to make sure It was well hidden she soon set off by rapid bounds in front of the dogs. The latter barking close upon her heels, she made a sudden bend and thus drew them far from the spot where this incident occurred The howling of the dogs be came fainter and fainter, the vallant an mal having doubtless led them two away, into the Canari bogs, where the dogs often the scent.

In fact, later they were seen returning to the village in an exhausted condition, while the intelligent mother doubtless returned to the bushes to find the little fawn she had so cleverly hidden and placed in safety.-Vulgarisation Scientifique.

When Matches Were Introduced. The Atlas, a London newspaper, published on Jan. 10! 1830, the following paragraph under the head of "Instantaneous Light:" "Among the different methods invented for obtaining light instantaneously ought certainly to be recorded that of Mr. Walker. chemist, Stockton-on-Tees. He supplies the purchaser with pregared matches, which are put into boxes, but are not liable to change in the atmosphere, and also with a piece of fine glass paper folded in two. Even a strong blow will not inflame the matches, because of the softness of the wood underneath, or does rubbing upon wood or any common substance produce any effect except that of spoiling the match. But when one is pinched between the folds of the glass paper and suddenly drawn out it is instantly inflamed. Mr. Walker does not make them for extensive sale, but only to supply the small demand in his own neighborhood."

The Parthenon. destruction of that famous building the Parthenon took place in 1687 during the siege of Athens by the Venetians. The Turks held the city, and the Parthenon was used for a powder magazine. One day during the conflict a Venetian bombshell dropped into the building, and the explosion followed which badly shattered the structure. From that date the renowned building has stood roofless and exposed to all the inclemencies of the weather. For more than 2,000 years the temple stood entire, and in lits ruins is the architectural wonder of the world.—New York American.

Peculiar Taxation In Holland. Some of the most peculiar of taxations recorded are to be found in the archives of Holland. In 1791, for instance, there was in existence a tax, imposed on all passengers traveling in Holland In 1874 a duty of 2 shillings was levied on each person who entered a tavern before noon, on those who entered a place of entertainment, on marriages and deaths and on many other things If a person was buried out of the district to which he belonged the tax was payable twice over.

"Among other things here Kynaston, the boy, had the good turn to appear in three shapesfirst as a poor woman in ordinary clothes to please Morose, then in tine clothes as a gallant and in them was clearly the prettiest woman in the whole house." He had a year before declared that "Kynaston as Olympia made the loveliest lady that I ever saw
