Bullet That Killed Nelson

In the room containing loans from his Majesty the King at the Japan-British Exhibition can be seen the natural bullet which killed Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar. Dr. Beatty, who extracted it from the wound, gave it to King William IV, who placed it in the royal collection. On one side of it are embedded portions of the gold lace from the admiral's uniform, which were forced into the wound. This bullet is kept at Buckingham Palace, and was brought to the exhibition by the King's own armorer, who, before handing it over to the Exhibition, sealed the glass in which it now reposes with his own private signet ring.

Flesherton Happenings

(This week.) Sunday last was an eventful day in the Methodist church due to the formal opening of the newly installed handsome pipe organ and the impressive services conducted by the old time beloved pastor, Rev. Josias Greene, of Clinton, who labored here over forty years ago. Large congregations greeted the venerable divine who notwithstanding his seventy-six years, fifty of which have been spent in the ministry, preached with all his early vigor, earnestness and power. The sermon in the morning was on the glory of the church, based on the 87 Psalm, and that in the evening from the words of St. Paul "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ" was a solemn and impressive message listened to intently by a large body of worshippers. Mr. Arthur Lye, of Toronto, an excellent musician, presided at the organ and thrilled the congregations with the delightful music produced. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Wellwood, assisted in the services and Mr. M. K. Richardson, to whom much credit is due for procuring the new organ, spoke briefly at the morning service, fittingly introducing Rev. Mr. Greene, a stranger to many in the congregation now. The contributions to the organ fund at both services were very liberal. On Monday evening there was again a good attendance at the recital and song service when Mr. Lye again presided at the organ and gave the audience a rich musical treat. The pastor presided and after the opening hymn called on Rev. Mr. Milligan to lead in prayer. Mr. Lye's musical numbers were interspersed with music by the choir, reading by Mrs. W. Trimble, solo each by Mrs. R. H. Wright and Dr. Murray, short speech by Mr. M. K. Richardson and an address by Rev. Mr. Greene which was replete and interesting. By special request Mr. Lye rendered as closing number the Dead March in Saul after which the National Anthem was sung and Mr. Greene pronounced the benediction. Upon motion by Mr. Richardson and Mr. Thurston Mr. Lye was given a hearty vote of thanks for his appreciated services. The new organ, which is a two manual instrument, contains eleven speaking stops, dulciana, melodia, principal, fifteenth, swell organ, open diapason, stop diapason, viola, travesty flute, pedal bourdon, sixteen feet, thirty notes, forty pedal and piano pedal and tremolo to the swell. It has 587 pipes. The instrument, which is over twelve feet wide, seventeen feet deep and nineteen feet high is enclosed in a handsome quarter cut oak case of chase design surmounted by twenty three speaking front pipes richly decorated in gold. It has great power in brilliancy and when necessary can be diminished to the softest effects usually heard in large-city organs. The manufacturers are Edward Lye & Sons, who have been in half a century in business in Toronto, and have, we learn, seventy-five of these organs in use in that city which testifies to their skill in building and the popularity of their instruments. Including the parts used from the former organ in use here the present instrument, which is valued about $1500, has been installed at a cost of something over $800, the half of which is being contributed by the wealthy philanthropist, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, upon the congregation raising the balance which we understand is now covered.

Crazed Sailor Causes Trouble.

(Owen Sound Times.) A week ago a man named George Appleton shipped on the Caribou at God for the down trip. It was as soon as the man came aboard that he had been drinking heavily and though his actions for the subsequent days or two were very strange the rest of the crew little attention to him thinking that he was undergoing a sobriety process. One of his hallucinations was that the boat was infested with rats which he vainly tried to catch. On Friday he proceeded to do some artistic spluttering of his face with varicolored paints. The result as may be imagined was so bizarre that his mates were convulsed with laughter whereat Appleton became violent and rushed about the deck trying to smash something up in general. The Caribou being by this time in the harbor, Capt. Batten called for the police and Chief McCleary and P. C. W. O. Foster hurried down to the boat. Meanwhile the man was clearly demented had washed off some of the paint from his face, and hid himself away down the hold. It was here that he was found by the officers. But when they approached to arrest he immediately showed signs of a fresh tantrum and wishing to avoid a force on him the constables retreated out of sight, and after several successful manoeuvres his mates got him out of the hold. As he made a dash for the upper deck P. Foster intercepted him, and after a few moments scuffle he was manacled and taken to the cells in the lab. He was with difficulty restrained from becoming desperate as he evidently was in fear that the officers would do him physical violence. On Saturday morning he was brought before the police magistrate and was remanded for a week that his mental condition might be ascertained.

Have They?

The Municipal World is supposed to be an authority on all questions arising from Municipal Councils and in reply to a recent query on the subject of dog by-laws they have answered as follows. "The council has no authority to pass a by-law imposing a tax on dogs. The act passed last session of the Legislature imposed the tax mentioned therein on dogs in every municipality, and it is the duty of the council to collect it, and by-laws that have hitherto been passed by councils under the authority of subsection 3 of section 540 of Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, and which were in force when the repealing section was passed can, of course, now have no force or effect, as their provisions as to taxing dogs have been superseded by those of the statute."

Post Came

Back Home

Jack had not spent five minutes looking after it. "I asked my brother if the fence had not been a little costly." "Said he: 'That's the cheapest fence I ever had on my farm. It cost more to build with than the old kind we used to have so much trouble with when we were boys; but once put up it is the best ever. Those posts can never rot. The longer they are up, the harder and the stronger they become. I made a few little mistakes when I began the work, but they were with these posts, and I now know how to provide against them. One of the great advantages of this sort of fence is that it never needs to be repaired. At the same time, it is out and break, but that will not be the fault of the posts. And as you will remember, it was always these posts that used to give us the worry when we were boys."

"I asked him if the posts never loosened and fell over, or if he had to be after them to make so much work for us in the old days." "Well," said he, "they do loosen sometimes. But do you remember how solid the wooden posts were when they had been in the ground a good while and the fence began to rot. The longer they remained there, the stronger they became. That's the way of these posts. I never have to with these posts. I never have to ever disturbed, but are always become imbedded in the earth. So have I sunk them in the earth, and the result is that they are always just as strong as when they were first put in. This farm could stand the strongest man on the post, and I am just now completing the fence on my farm, and I can assure you that it will be settled forever. No more time will be wasted looking after them, and there will be no danger of the horses breaking in like they did at this spot thirty years ago, or so—as you may remember."
