

Within a radius of feet of his flying base, for any living thing, man held on to the rope, in time he might quiet down the bag on his right, boss. It might be best obeyed, and Jim tried to try the fastenings.

"Nothing loose is steady, you devil," he went on, laid its ears down, and backed him across the corral, driving the four men with it.

For a quarter of an hour Jim vainly approached near Jim, mount the roan, but by striking and kicking, the savage brute gratified every effort.

"Guess we'll have to throw him all, but it's a pity to take anything of him that way," and then Jim's voice came from a higher level.

"Gee whiz! Let him go." The chance had come whilst he was speaking, and with a tiger-like yell, the cowboy had taken it, dodging the flying hoofs like a miracle.

It was done so quickly that no one had time to see how Jim got into the saddle, and after that there was not enough time for the spectators to seek shelter in the first doorway that offered.

But it was a magnificent sight to those who were safe from the beast's heels.

(To be continued.)

VALUABLE Hotel Property For Sale

The undersigned has received instructions to sell by public auction at the

Murphy House, Markdale

Thursday, Aug. 3, 1911

at TWO P.M. that valuable hotel property known as the

MURPHY HOUSE and STABLES

This property consists of a large two-storey brick hotel with frame kitchen attached, also large frame stable and frame

This is a licensed Hotel and doing a good business.

TERMS.—Twenty per cent of the purchase money on the day of sale, balance in thirty days with interest.

W.M. MURPHY, Prop. D. McNeil auctioneer.

St. Jerome's College

Berlin, Ont. Canada. Founded 1864.

In some country districts in Ireland, it is not unusual to see the owners' names simply chalked on traders' carts and other vehicles, in order to comply with the regulations. Unfortunately, it is custom lands, due to the playing of pranks on the part of "bohys" malitiously inclined, who sometimes ruin out the lettering. A case of this kind having occurred, a constabulary sergeant accosted a countryman whose name had been thus wiped out, and said to him, "This cart yours, my good man?"

"As course it is," was the reply. "Do you see anything the matter wid?"

"I observe," said the pompous officer, "that yer name is obliterated."

"Then, ye're wrong, sor," retorted the countryman, who had never come across the long dictionary word before, "for me name's O'Reilly, an' I don't care who knows it!"

FAMOUS EYES

Genuses as a Rule Have Blue or Blue-grey Orbs

It is said that the majority of the world's genuses have had blue or blue-grey eyes; while the predominating color in lunatic asylums and criminal institutions is mentioned as brown.

The following are the eye-colors of some of the most famous people in history.

The eyes of Caesar were black and piercing.

Cleopatra's eyes were light hazel. Helen of Troy had blue orbs; those of Joan of Arc and Mary Queen of Scots, liquid grey; Queen Elizabeth's were hazel.

Washington had very forceful grey eyes that commanded respect and obedience.

Keen glances came from Napoleon's grey eyes that seemed to search men's hearts.

Mark Twain's eyes were small, black and keen.

Gladstone had large, luminous grey eyes.

Disraeli's eyes in his youth were quite black, and it is remarked that he had "the most mocking, lying-in-wait sort of expression conceivable."

Carlyle describes the eyes of Wellington as "beautiful light-blue, full of mild valor and geniality."

HIS MEDITATIONS

Soon after Singleton's first baby was born, Mrs. Singleton went upstairs one evening and found her husband standing by the side of the crib and gazing earnestly at the child.

As she stood still for the moment, touched by the sight, the tears filled her eyes as she thought, "Oh, how dearly Charlie loves that boy!"

Her arms stole softly round his neck as she rubbed her cheek caringly against his shoulder. Singleton started slightly at her touch.

"Darling," he murmured dreamily, "it is incomprehensible to me how they can get up such a crib as that for four dollars and a half!"

REASSURING THE AUDIENCE

The fictitious Joe Hall (the original look of the Beggar's Opera) in the year 1730, when the scenes room at Covent Garden being on fire, and the audience greatly alarmed, was ordered, Rich, the manager, to run on the stage and explain the matter, which he did in the following words:

"Ladies and gentlemen, our heaven's sake, don't be frightened, our curtain's burnt out. But if it's not, we have a reservoir of one hundred磅 of water over your heads, that would drown you all in five minutes."

Fall Term Opens Aug. 10th

ELLIOTT

TORONTO.

Stands to-day with success. Catalogue

within a radius of feet of his flying base, for any living thing, man held on to the rope, in time he might quiet down the bag on his right, boss. It might be best obeyed, and Jim tried to try the fastenings.

"Nothing loose is steady, you devil," he went on, laid its ears down, and backed him across the corral, driving the four men with it.

For a quarter of an hour Jim vainly approached near Jim, mount the roan, but by striking and kicking, the savage brute gratified every effort.

"Guess we'll have to throw him all, but it's a pity to take anything of him that way," and then Jim's voice came from a higher level.

"Gee whiz! Let him go." The chance had come whilst he was speaking, and with a tiger-like yell, the cowboy had taken it, dodging the flying hoofs like a miracle.

It was done so quickly that no one had time to see how Jim got into the saddle, and after that there was not enough time for the spectators to seek shelter in the first doorway that offered.

But it was a magnificent sight to those who were safe from the beast's heels.

(To be continued.)

BEARDS AND KINGS

George V. is the First of His Name Not Clean Shaven.

It was often remarked at the accession of Edward VII. that he was the last bearded King for nearly three hundred years. The ill-fated King Charles I. was his immediate predecessor.

None, however, is so practical and at the same time so soundly sensible as that proposed by Lord Tenterden.

The Crystal Palace is to be purchased and re-adapted as a permanent memorial.

Here spaces will be reserved for the Colonies and the Dominions beyond the seas for the exhibition of their specialties, and from time to time National and International exhibitions will be given.

One portion will be set apart as an up-to-date pleasure ground; while it is suggested that the Palace shall also become the headquarters for the National Aero Corps.

In the event of any National crisis or emergency the whole Palace would be placed in reserve at the command of the Government.

It is estimated that the total cost of the purchase of the Palace and the carrying out of the necessary alterations will be $300,000, and an additional $500,000 will be required for working capital.

If the scheme is carried into effect a clear income of $750,000 would probably be produced yearly.

All the money is to be raised by public subscription, and hundreds of promises have already been given.

JUST BY CHANCE

Many of the Interesting Contrivances of To-day Were Discovered by Mere Accident.

Many common objects of the present, many little personal adornments and useful articles which are seen and utilized by us day after day, have in interesting though little-known histories of their own. Many of the contrivances of to-day were discovered through sheer chance. Soap, for instance, was the outcome of an accident. A woman found occasion to bottle some lye of soda in an iron pot,

and discovered that by so doing she had produced a substance which would form a thick latex in water, and was a great help in removing dirt. This set her thinking. She remembered that the pot used was a dirty one,

which had still remaining in it some vestiges of olive oil. This had combed with the lye of soda, and thus led to the discovery of soap.

Do you know the meaning of the moustache? It has a deep symbolism.

Several centuries ago when a horde

of Arabs and Berbers invaded Spain

they seized the southern slopes and drove the Christians who had been in possession, into the mountains of the north. Though these Moors, as the Arabs and Berbers were called,

were mild and tolerant rulers in many ways, and mixed marriages became common, there was constant strife resulting from the difference in creeds, and much confusion as to who were

Moslems and who were Christians. It was therefore determined that the Christians should wear some badge of their faith by which they might always be known, and misunderstandings avoided.

In wearing a beard Charles I. followed the example of his father and, as he was a Scottish beholder, he was an English King, he probably followed the fashion of his predecessors in the northern kingdom, for he was preceded by two sons and a boy King, and had no precedent in this respect to follow,

even if he had desired one. Henry

VII. nearly a hundred years before his time, had been as much an admirer in respect to whiskers as

Edward VII. was, for like our late

King sat on the English throne,

he was clean-shaven. The conqueror and his two sons and successors were content with a mousture, only, as were Henry II. and

Richard II., but Richard the Lion-

Hearted seemed to have made the best and most fashionable for his brother John Henry III., and the first three Edwards entirely gave the razor the shave.

Thus, George V. is the first to wear a beard, Edward VII.

was only following the example of his most famous predecessors.

Thus, out of the thirty-three kings who have ruled in England, the bearded and the clean-shaven almost provide a tie, for there are thirteen former and fourteen of the latter.

So Kings wore mustaches.

KING EDWARD MEMORIAL

A Proposal to Purchase Crystal Palace and Readapt it Permanently.

Various schemes have been put forward during the past few months for the erection of a National Memorial to King Edward VII.

None, however, is so practical and at the same time so soundly sensible as that proposed by Lord Tenterden.

The Crystal Palace is to be purchased and re-adapted as a permanent memorial.

Here spaces will be reserved for the Colonies and the Dominions

beyond the seas for the exhibition of their specialties, and from time to time National and International exhibitions will be given.

One portion will be set apart as an up-to-date pleasure ground;

while it is suggested that the Palace