RAILWAY SUPERINTENDENT CURED OF CATARRH!

Morrison's "No. 26" Prescription Cured Obsolete Case.

WITWOODIAG, N. B. May 19, 1911.

"I had been troubled for quite a number of years with a very annoying case of Catarrh of the head. It kept me from sleeping and splitting my nose all the time, and my work was very much interfered with. I had been treated by the most famous of the medical profession, but to no avail. I was then induced to try Morrison's 'No. 26' Catarrh Cure. The first box I used was a relief, and the second box I decided to use it. I used 3 boxes and am now cured. I feel so much better that I want you to know it. You have a fine remedy indeed in your 'No. 26' Catarrh Cure. Everyone who has Catarrh ought to know about it and should use it."

A. H. Robinson, Sept. E. & H. R. R. The above prescription is not a "Cure" but a temporary relief. Morrison's Prescription is not a "Cure" but a temporary relief. Morrison's Prescription is not a "Cure" but a temporary relief. Morrison's Prescription is not a "Cure" but a temporary relief.

LOCKING FOR GOLD.

Londoner Says De Rougemont Is In the Ural Mountains.

The whereabouts of that mysterious wanderer, Louis de Rougemont, have been disclosed.

"Yes," said a merchant in London (Eng.) the other day, "De Rougemont is quite well, and I am in close touch with him."

"He is in the Ural Mountains, looking for gold."

The reporter laughed rather heartily. It sounded just like De Rougemont.

"It is quite well for you to laugh," said the merchant, "but a well-known engineer has just been to see me, and tells me that De Rougemont is perfectly right, and has informed me that for gold the Ural Mountains surpass Western Australia and Klondyke."

"Yes," added the merchant, warning up to the subject, "you told me that when you met De Rougemont he was a nervous individual, quite ready to run up the wall, and throw things at the public, but in all the things that he wrote there is very little of falsehood. When he told me he had ridden upon turtles, I laughed at him, and remarked that the moment you touch turtle it dives." "No," said De Rougemont; "not if you get hold of its shoulders and hold up its head."

"He borrowed some turtles" from me, and proved his contention at a music hall in the West End, and also by riding a turtle at Southport out to sea. The humor of it was that he got to the ship, but then lost the turtle, who was quite sick of the job, and also in both cases the insides of his legs were very badly scraped."

"You are quite right in thinking," the merchant continued, "that De Rougemont is quite a remarkable man. He is now eighty years of age, and when I last heard of him one of his acquaintances informed me that in the Ural Mountains he walked forty miles at a stretch, and turned up at the end of the march perfectly fresh."

"I suppose you did not know," he continued, "that De Rougemont is a most confirmed spiritualist? You see this old bureau here?"—pointing to a rather nice piece of Sheraton. "De Rougemont has promised that when he dies—which he expects will be soon—he will give three taps on this particular door, and if I hear it he expects me to be converted to his own ideas on the subject of spiritualism."

Strategy.

Finding it impossible to see the stage while the lady in front of him wore her large hat, Jones, in his most insinuating manner, asked her to remove it. "Take off my hat!" she exclaimed. "Why what impudence! Of course I won't take off my hat!"

"Very well, madam," said the man. "I beg your pardon for asking the favor, but I rather think you will."

When the curtain rose on the second act the owner of the beribboned and heavily-trimmed structure heard hoarse cries, such as "Take it off, you chump!" "Remove that hat, there!" "Take it off! Take it off!" It is quite needless to say that the hat immediately landed in the lady's lap. The gentleman leaped toward her, thanking her profusely. And the poor, imposed upon woman probably never found out that the man had put on his own silk hat, and that all the "horrible" yells were aimed at him.

The Oil Tree of China.

The tung, or wood oil tree, is worthily named the national tree of China. It is stately in appearance, with smooth green bark and wide-spreading branches, affording fine shade. It bears a fruit resembling a small orange. Each nut contains three triangular seeds similar to small Brazil nuts. The oil is pressed from these seeds and the refuse is used as a fertilizer. The oil is used principally for polishing woodwork and dressing leather. Considerable quantities are exported.

The wood of the tung tree is used for making musical instruments, fine boxes and the framework of small houses.

Regardless of Cost.

The Princess of Monaco is so rich that she regards money with contempt. On one occasion, after a burglary had been committed in her apartments, she astounded a magistrate by stating that she never counted her money and did not know which of her jewels had been stolen, as she never troubled to find out how many she had.

Reading Up.

"My wife is much interested in the comet."

"The comet? The comet was here last year."

"I know. She's putting old newspapers under the carpets throughout the house and catching up with the news as she puts 'em down."

That Explains.

"I have a dog and a hen which are fast friends. Isn't that queer?"

"I don't think so—merely natural affinity."

"In what way?"

"I believe your hen and your dog are both setters."

As a Sort of Light Training.

Ugardon—Your cousin is a practical physician, isn't he?

Atom—He has discovered one or two specifics for cancer, I believe, but he hasn't settled down to regular practice yet.

Hugo's Slip.

Violat Hugo puts into the mouth of Charlemagne, in "Aymaillet," the words, "You dream like a scholar of Sorbonne." That famous institution was founded in 1254, 450 years after the days of Charlemagne.

A Big Claim.

"He's got a lot of nerve, hasn't he?"

"I should say. Knows the art of blunting his creditors, doesn't he?"

"Blunting his creditors? Why, man, he claims he can bluff his wife!"

SAWDUST BREAD.

Queer Product of German Bakery Is Equaled Elsewhere.

Bread made out of sawdust. Sounds queer, but it is a fact. That ancient anecdote about the Frenchman losing his horse just as he had succeeded through the aid of green goggles in rescuing the animal to eat sawdust instead of grain should now be revived and sent out to make the rounds of the press. But to return to the bread. It is a fact that there is a large bakery in Berlin where they are turning out 20,000 loaves of sawdust bread each day. Interesting, if not attractive, surely.

In making this peculiar bread the sawdust is first subjected to a process of fermentation and various chemical manipulations. Then it is mixed with one-third part of rye flour, formed into loaves and baked in ovens like any other bread. Although it is meant for consumption by horses only, the manufacturers claim that in case of famine it would furnish a nutritious and highly satisfactory food for human beings.

Sawdust bread may not taste so bad as it sounds. In various parts of the world bread is obtained from trees. For example, in the Molucca Islands the starchy pith of the sago palm furnishes a white, floury meal, which is made into flat, oblong loaves and baked in curious little ovens divided into small oblong cells just big enough to receive the loaves.

In Lapland the inner bark of pine trees, well ground and mixed with oat flour, is made into bread, which are cooked in a pan over a fire. In Kamshatka pine bark and birch bark are used for bread without the addition of any other substance, being reduced to powder by pounding, made into loaves and baked.

Along the Columbia River bread is made from a kind of moss that grows on species of fir trees. After being dried it is sprinkled with water, allowed to ferment, rolled into balls as big as a man's head and baked in pits, with the help of hot stones. Travelers who have tasted it say that it is by no means unpalatable. The Californian Indians collect the pollen of cat-tails in large quantities by beating it off the plants and catching it on blankets. They make bread of it. But as a delicacy they prefer bread of grasshopper flour.

Fruit as Food.

In these days of impure drinking water, water famines and filtered water it is well to know that one of the great advantages of fruit is that it offers us pure water, for which we do not need a filter, to the amount of nearly 50 per cent. in berries and 92 per cent. in watermelons.

Oranges and lemons are not only valuable by reason of their potash salts, but especially for their citric acid. A case of paralysis of the entire right side is reported, where the juice of oranges, adopted as a regular diet, with chicken broth, appeared to do much good.

As an aid to digestion—a really material aid—the pineapple stands alone among the fruit. Its vegetable pepsin neutralizes—or perhaps, rather, digests—albuminous substances in the stomach. Fresh pineapple—or, better still, the fresh juice of one—placed in direct contact with eggs or gelatine or milk, will prove the fact conclusively by producing a better tasting dish. In cases of catarrhal ailments of the throat and in its downward connection of the alimentary canal or tract the use of pineapple cannot be over-estimated, and it acts with equal force in malarial affections.

As for the date and the banana, they contain sufficient nutriment to sustain life. The salts and organic acids of the apple tend to improve the quality of the blood.

Secret of Success.

"Push," said the Widow.
 "Never be led," said the Pencil.
 "Be up-to-date," said the Calendar.
 "Always be cool," said the Ice.
 "Do business on tick," said the Clock.
 "Never lose your head," said the Barrel.
 "Do a driving business," said the Hammer.
 "Aspire to greater things," said the Nutmeg.
 "Make light of everything," said the Fire.
 "Make much of small things," said the Microscope.
 "Never do anything off-hand," said the Glove.
 "Spend much time on reflection," said the Mirror.

One Thing She Couldn't Do.

The young girl friend of the artist student stood in the art gallery gazing at the famous classic statues.

"It is all very well to talk about the Venus of Milo's being a model of womanly perfection," she said, eyeing the armless goddess critically, "but she never could button a one-piece dress down the back."

Realism.

Friend—What on earth are you doing with that picture?
 Great Artist—I am rubbing a piece of raw meat over this rabbit in the foreground. Mrs. de Shoddie will be here this afternoon, and when she sees her pet dog smell of that rabbit she'll buy it.

Well, Rather.

Uncle Jackson (showing city boy the farm)—With all your city education, sonny, I'll warrant you don't know which side you milk the cow from?
 The Boy—Sure, I do! It's the under side!

Evidently.

"Mary, I've just been reading about a New York family that had the same nursemaid for sixty-two years."

"Goodness! She must be acting as nursemaid to that family in its second childhood."

Satisfactory Excuse.

"I am a self-made man," said the pompous individual, with his chest expanded.

The other looked at him critically.
 "Your excuse is satisfactory," he said.

RIVERDALE New Postage Stamps.

(Special to The Standard.)

A happy and prosperous New Year to all the Standard readers.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Dillon, of Blantyre, and Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Ward, of this community, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee on Christmas.

Mr. Ben Cutting was engaged with McFarland and Co., of Markdale, for a few weeks.

Messrs. Hugh and James Baird, proprietors of the Riverdale lumber mill, spent Christmas at their home in Thornbury.

Miss Lou Wiley, of Meaford, is holidaying at the parental home here.

Miss Ida Thompson, of Markdale, visited her brother, Mr. Ed. recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodgkin, of Cherry Grove, were the guests of Mrs. W. Stephenson on Christmas.

Miss Bella Walker, professional nurse, of Bethel, Conn., U.S.A., is holidaying at the parental home here.

A fast and furious game of hockey between the married and single men of this vicinity was played on the Riverdale skating rink on Christmas afternoon. The score being 12-10 in favor of the married men.

At the annual school meeting held on the last Wednesday of 1911, the installation of officers for the ensuing year was as follows: Trustees—James Wiley, H. Erskine and W. Richardson; Sec. Treas.—H. Erskine; Caretaker—E. Wiley.

Our efficient school teacher, Miss Bita Briscoe, spent Christmas with Toronto friends. We understand Miss Briscoe will ply her profession in Blantyre Public School during 1912.

We are informed that Miss Scott, of Ingersoll, has been engaged as teacher in our Public School for the ensuing year. Miss Scott comes highly recommended as a popular and highly accomplished young lady and we join in wishing her unlimited success in the application of her profession in this vicinity.

The box social held in our school on the evening of December 21 was a glorious success and those who attended it were privileged to enjoy a classical program, every number being delightfully rendered and enthusiastically applauded by the large audience. Mr. P. McCullough, of Markdale, ably and creditably discharged the duties of chairman, and Budd Matthews, as auctioneer, was a financial star. Generally speaking, it was one of the most classy and up-to-date entertainments ever held in this or adjoining communities and we congratulate the managing committee on their success. A great deal of the success is also due to the teacher, Miss Briscoe.

MEANING OF THE CROSS

This cross (in red) has been adopted in Canada and all over America as the emblem under which the Crusade against Consumption is carried on.

Every reader knows of the ravages of this disease; how, too often, the bread-winner of the family falls a victim, or the young man or young woman, with a promise of a happy and useful life, is stricken down.

This modern Crusade, like the one of old, is a winning fight. The death rate from Consumption in this province shows a decrease of over 25% in the past few years.

Nearly 6000 of these poor sufferers have been cared for in our Consumptive Homes in Muskoka and near Weston. To-day we have 300 patients under treatment—patients who, if they had the money, could not through fear of contagion gain admittance into other hospitals.

In the Muskoka Free Hospital alone there are now caring for 156 patients. 128 of these cannot pay a single cent for the cost of their maintenance, 15 pay 70c. per day, 1 pay 57c. per day, 12 pay 50c. or less per day.

Our Trustees, having faith in the generous-hearted people of Canada, have continued to carry on this work during the past year.

Money to pay doctors, food, nursing and caring of these sick ones is urgently needed. Will your readers help and have the joy of sharing in a work that has the promise of the Master's reward?
