Memory is a subject that still baffles the world of science. Nobody can define the part of the branch of psychology.

Your memory, for instance, works best in the morning, while worst in the evening. It varies, too, according to the state of your blood. In people troubled with anaemia or dyspepsia the memory is usually below the average. The memory improves under Every conceiv ble treatment has been resorted to n the hope of hitting upon AN EFFECTIVE ONE.

The observation of several physiians has led them to the belief that ay fever is not a universal disease ut is confined to persons of sensiive and irritable temperaments or ndencies. Men whose occupations ead them to a hardy normal sort of ife are never, it appears, bothered y it. Some physicians go so far as say that hay fever most commonly attacks men of a certain class-generally professional men. The name "pollinosis" indicates that most generally is regarded as a prime cause. The hay fever victim knows almost to the day when he may expect his annual attack, ind this is usually coincident with the flowering of certain plants. Prior to the recent marvellous discoveries of oceanography no nat uralist could conceive the possibil, ity of life in the depths of the sea. The reason is that as one of the principal factors of life is light and as the rays of the sun do not penetrate very far into the waters of the ocean life was considered as impossible, and since experiments have shown that no ray of light continues its passage through a liquid medium after 1,700 meters have been reach ed, the inference was that further down light fails absolutely and there is eternal night.

A FAMILIAR PROVERB.

A man is known by his friends" but a variation of the more familar proverb. "A man is known by at as well embalm in our proverall philosophy the saying. "A man known by the enemies he makes." is he much an honor to have ome men for enemies as to have much a disgrace to have some men on friends as to have other men for enemies. The friendship of the disponorable, the impure, the enomies of God, grafters of all kinds in socicty, business and politics is as dis-

he asked excitedly

other men for friends. It is as gradeful as the friendship of good men is honorable.
