For Weal or for Woe; Or, A Dark Temptation

CHAPTER XX—(Cont'd.)
Percy bowed his head on the cold, clammy hands that clung to his arm so tenaciously.

"Never was a man so fearfully tried; his fair, handsome face had grown white with emotions deep and shadowy into his eyes.

"Ah, what could it matter now? His hopes were dead; his heart crushed, yet how could he consent?

"There is one whom I love next to yourself, Percy," the faint voice went on. "If one whom I love so dearly were to die, I would not weep for her care for you, the lover, you would not weep for me. I would not weep for you, the lover, you would not weep for me. I would not weep for you, the lover, you would not weep for me."

Percy shook his head. "I would not weep for you, the lover, you would not weep for me."

"There is an organ in each of us, Percy, which is an organ of love. It is an organ of love. It is an organ of love. It is an organ of love. It is an organ of love."

"There is an organ in each of us, Percy, which is an organ of love. It is an organ of love. It is an organ of love. It is an organ of love. It is an organ of love."

ALLOWED TO GROW UP.

As a result of some very outspoken comments by the Queen of Norway, Princess Mary, the only daughter of the King and Queen, is at last to be allowed to "grow up." Consequently, when next her Royal Highness is seen in London, she will be wearing clothes more suited to her years, while a few simple articles of jewelry are now

A piece of camphor placed in the well of an oil lamp ensures a more brilliant light.
New chimney glasses should be placed in cold soap-suds, and boiled slowly. This prevents them cracking.

Home Hints.
Celery roots, boiled, cooled and cut into dice, make a very acceptable salad.
Lace continually cleaned with gasoline or naphtha will turn yellow quickly.
Good lard is much better than butter for basting roasted meat and for frying.
A little mustard rubbed on zippers before washing them will remove the odor of fish.
To keep clothing warm from freezing on the line in cold weather, put a little salt in the last rinsing water.

CHAPTER XXII.

WE LEFT LITTLE GAY clinging to the broken raft, his eyes fixed on that horrible cry of "murder" as it rang on the air.
"Never," he said, "will I ever forget that moment when I saw that shadow in the distance of a dark night."
The moon shone down on the sea, and the young man's face was turned toward it with a look of despair.

Slightly Mixed.

Mother (at telephone, giving order to grocer, and scolding baby in mischievous tone): "Send me a pound of fresh—butter! —butter and stop that—two dozen eggs—or mother'll spank you—the last you sent me were stale—you naughty boy!"

That's a Net.

The visitor was examining the class. "Can any little boy or girl here tell me what a fish net is made of?" he kindly inquired. "A lot of little holes tied together with strings," smiled the never-failing "bright boy."

With every step in his walk, Percy instinctively tried to recall the words of the girl who had been his first love. He could not remember the exact words, but he knew the meaning of each and every one.
