Hundreds Killed In Omaha, Nebraska—Communication With the Stricken City Cut Off

Omaha, March 22.—After a night of terror, in which women and children, frantic with grief, walked the streets cold and homeless, Omaha awoke to-day to a scene of almost unbelievable devastation: Entering the city from the south-west, after wiping Ralston entirely from the map, the tornado swept east, the county hospital to the west in a north-easterly direction, taking everything in its path. It travelled east to the river, and lost itself in the Iowa bluffs. Buildings were blown down or picked up by terrific force of the wind. Trees were levelled, and smaller structures were completely wrecked by the wind, which swept a path for itself through the most costly residence section, as well as the most low-lying parts of the city. Some of the finest homes there recently erected by Omaha's wealthiest men, are to-day a mass of ruins. Hundreds of families have been removed from the ruins. About fifty persons were in the theatre at the time of the disaster, and it is feared that most of them are buried in the debris.

After the tornado had passed, the rain came in even greater measure in a score of places. At least 25 houses were destroyed by flames. To add to the horror of the night, the electricity failed, wires went down, but the street lights were extinguished, leaving only the fitful glared from hundreds of lanterns to light the scenes of shrowd while the rescue parties were at work. Those sections of the city which have reported the heaviest loss of life are the districts surrounding the county hospital and the child institute, the territory near Twenty-fourth and Lake streets, and from there east. But from every point in the path of the storm, reports were received all night of people killed, or burned in the ruins of their homes.

Shortly before six o'clock last evening the storm signs were first noted. It appeared south-west of Omaha, coming toward the city with the speed of an express train. The roar of the whirling, twisting wind could be heard long before the sun struck, and people in the southern portion of the city asserted they could hear the angry rumble when it struck the village of Ralston. The vagrant of the storm was a huge funnel-shaped cloud, dark and lowering, which gradually narrowed into a funnel-shaped cloud that dipped southward, and wherever it struck it left a wake of death, injuries and wrecked homes. Almost all over the city people stood and watched the storm approaching, even when in its very path, some seemingly without the power to move, or not knowing which way to go. The streets in the storm's path were filled with debris.

Work of Rescue Begins. Although dazed for a time by the suddenness of the storm and the damage done, the people living in the wrecked portions of the city who were uninjured and those residing nearby hastened to the task of rescuing the injured. With a motor wagon pressed into service, physicians and nurses were hastily summoned. Hospitals and other buildings turned into relief stations for the injured, and ambulances for the dead. Every undertaker's establishment in the city, and even in South Omaha, was taxed to the limit in caring for the dead. As the night wore on, the devastation wrought by the storm became more and more evident, and the city commissioners, headed by Mayor Dahlman, took personal charge of the relief work.

Every policeman and fireman in Omaha, South Omaha, and Council

Bluffs, was used in an effort to prevent looting of buildings and to aid in the rescue of the injured and putting out of fire. Before morning a call for the local companies' State troops had been issued. The State troops will aid the regulars and the city officers in guarding the wrecked buildings and in searching the ruins for the dead and injured.

The heaviest toll was exacted in the western part of Omaha and in the vicinity of 24th and Lake, and from there north-east to 16th and Binney. This is the residential portion, and the destruction wrought was well nigh appalling. Whole blocks of homes were picked up and dashed into a shapeless mass. Street cars were buried in the tracks and demolished.

A moving-picture show at 24th and Lake was destroyed. Ten dead and eight injured thus far been removed from the ruins. About fifty persons were in the theatre at the time of the disaster, and it is feared that most of them are buried in the debris.

At 1:30 a.m. Omaha presented a sorry spectacle as a result of last night's terrific storm. From the Field Club, which is in the western part of the city to the Carter Lake Club, situated at the north-east extremity, is one mass of debris from two to six blocks wide. Federal soldiers from Fort Omaha assisted the police in keeping looters and morbid curiosity-seekers at bay. The presence of the soldiers gives the city the appearance of being under martial law.

In a short time I began to feel altogether different and better, and I saw that Zam-Buk was going to cure me. Well, I went on using it, and by the time I had used six boxes I was delighted to find myself entirely cured," 50c. all druggists and stores.
