...more desirable methods to adopt in putting these principles into practice and the objects to be gained in apple growing by their adoption there has been issued from Ottawa a comprehensive bulletin entitled "Co-operation and Fruit Growing." It has been prepared by Mr. Alex. McNeil, Chief of the Fruit Division, who is recognized as one of the foremost authorities of the day on the subject of fruit culture, commerce and co-operation.

In this work of 46 pages the subject is treated from practically every standpoint that interests the Canadian apple grower. Not only are the essentials and methods of co-operation clearly brought out but the advantages being derived through its agency are clearly shown. The aims of co-operation as applied to the fruit industry are enumerated as follows:—

(a) To bring fruit products as quickly as possible from the producer to the consumer.

(b) To encourage the best methods of production.

(c) To encourage thrift in the fruit grower, and economy, intelligence, enterprise and honesty in packing, grading and marketing fruit.

(d) To make it possible for a number of small growers to establish commercial standing that will be a guarantee for grade, marks or brands.

(e) To act as a credit organization to make advances on products in the process of being sold.

Dealing with the labor problem he points out that every kind of farming in Canada, but that Nova Scotia growers through their central association in 1911 were able to take care of a crop twice the usual size. Besides the other great advantages of closer markets and good prices secured for fruit the bulletin points out the savings that are effected in buying supplies. There is even a list of the purchases of one company in which the manager claims to have made a saving of $1,000 in one year on goods which in the aggregate $75,000 and upwards in packages, spraying equipment and materials, fertilizers, containers, etc.

The work is issued as Bulletin ... of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner's series and is now ... general distribution by the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa.

GRAFT TAILS ON FISH.

Goldfish So Treated Recently Sold for $1,000 in Japan.

Among the many interesting arts which the Japanese excel is that of the grafting of fish tails. Almost everyone has seen the bush-tailed goldfish with its four, five, and sometimes six, long tails, but it is not generally known that most of them are not its own.

When the little goldfish are very young their flesh is as clear as glass, so that one can see every organ in their tiny bodies. At this time the few that are born with two tails are put by themselves, and then a queer-looking knife, with a great magnifying glass fastened in front of his eye (we use sharp tools handy, reaches down under the water and cuts off the tail of the plain little fish and three or four of these tails are grafted on to the backbone where one was cut off and fastened with tiny bandages until they grow.

The Japanese, who are very skilful in queer things of this kind, sell the finest goldfish in the world, and it is a very good business, for very fine fish of the kind are worth as much as $300 to $400, and one sold not long ago for ...

A BATTLE IN THE ALPS.

Chamois and Eagle in a Desperate Duel.

It very often happens that the chamois of the Swiss Alps have to defend their young against the fierce attacks of eagles. Generally the little mountain-goats, after a brave struggle, succumb to the cruel beak and sharp claws of their enemy. A contribution to the Taglichen Rundschau of Zurich tells of one of these battles that resulted more happily for the chamois.

The observer, a Swiss mountain guide, was returning home one evening, down a steep mountain pass, when he saw above him on the rocks two chamois with their young. Over them a huge, full-grown eagle was circling. The chamois, evidently hoped to find safety in flight, for they came bounding down the rocks toward the spot where the guide had hidden himself.

Before they could escape, however, the eagle came swooping after them, and seized one of the young chamois that had lagged behind.

Immediately the two old chamois turned and attacked the bird so fiercely that he had to drop the little animal he had seized in his claws. The momentary advantage that the chamois had gained did not last long, however, for the eagle began rending and tearing them with cruel strokes of his long talons. Now that the fight had actually begun, the chamois would not retreat, but bravely stood their ground. The young, trembling with fear, and bleating piteously, crouched against their parents, and unwittingly hampered their defence.

Every time the eagle swooped down on the group, the two older chamois, rising on their hind legs, offered their horns. The long, deep scratches and the dripping blood that appeared after each attack showed that the battle was telling on them, although with each swoop, too, a cloud of feathers and the eagle's raucous cries showed that the chamois' little horns were also finding their mark. After each attack the eagle would return to a near-by rock, where he sat gazing with his beady eyes at the group below. Then he would swoop again.

Soon the fierce encounters began to exhaust the chamois. The little ones were bleating more and more anxiously, and the animals were all pressing more closely together. The older ones were clearly less alert.

Finally, after the eagle had taken a particularly long rest, he came swooping down again. The mother goat struggled to get upon her hind feet, but was too weak to raise herself. As the eagle came on, however, the chamois buck rose to meet it. There was a flash of clawing talons. Then, with a sudden vicious thrust, the chamois dug his horns into the breast of the great bird. With a wild beating of its wings, the eagle freed itself, and tried to fly away. But the wound was too deep. He thrashed about helplessly on the ground, and the chamois, quick to follow up their advantage, gored and trampled it with their horns and hoofs.

When their enemy was quite dead, the little family, limping and nursing their wounds, made off beyond a projecting cliff.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, JUNE 15.

Lesson XI.—Jacob before Pharaoh. Gen. 46, 28 to 47; 12, 28-31. Golden Text, Rom. 8. 28.

The passage intervening between this and our last lesson records the events incident to the return of Joseph's brethren to their father in Canaan and the migration of Jacob and his entire household into Egypt. It also contains a list of the male offspring of each of the twelve sons of Jacob, giving the total number of the combined households as threescore and ten souls. Having instructed his brethren how to conduct themselves in the presence of Pharaoh, and what to reply to any questions he might ask concerning their occupation, Joseph proceeds to arrange for a formal presentation of his father and a representative company of his brothers to the king.

Verse 1. The land of Goshen—Probably the Egyptian Kesem, about forty miles northeast of Cairo. (Compare The Lesson Text Studies for June 8.)

2. Five men—Doubtless including Reuben, Judah, and Benjamin, though the names of those selected are not given.

Presented them unto Pharaoh—Introduced them to Pharaoh.

3. What is your occupation?—Apparently a customary question put to all strangers presented at court, though a question of importance also as affecting the disposition to be made of so large a company of immigrants.

Shepherds—Their calling precluded them from association with the higher classes of merchants, soldiers, and priests, and determined also the section of the country in which they might be permitted to settle. Fortunately for them, and thanks in part to the shrewdness of their brother Joseph, their announced occupation destined them to occupy during the remaining years of famine the most productive and fruitful region of the entire land.

6. Able men—Literally, men of activity, meaning men of ability, capable of having oversight of larger interests.

My cattle—Ancient Egypt was famous for its fine breeds of cattle, especially oxen, the ox being a symbol of deity. The successive Pharaohs possessed large herds, and some of the inscriptions which have been deciphered mention the mer, the name which the officer having supervision of the royal herds was called.

7. Jacob blessed Pharaoh—Saluted him solemnly with benedictions and best wishes for his welfare.

9. Few—Few compared with those of Isaac, who lived to be one hundred and eighty (Gen. 35. 28), and Abraham, who lived to be one hundred and seventy-five (Gen. 25. 7); still fewer when compared with the ages of the patriarchs mentioned in Gen. 11 and very few indeed as compared to those of the antediluvians in chapter 5, one of whom, Methuselah, is reported to have reached nine hundred and sixty-nine.

Evil—The word recalls his early exile, his strife with Laban, and his subsequent successive experiences of sorrow.

11. Placed his father and his brethren—Gave them a dwelling place.

The land of Rameses—So called only in later times after Rameses II, the Pharaoh of the Oppression, had built cities and himself dwelt in the eastern part of the delta. The priestly writer, however, living much later still, is free to refer to the district by either its earlier or its later name.

12. Nourished his father, and his brethren—Provided food for them during the remaining years of famine.

According to their families—Or, according to the number of their little ones.

The remaining verses of the assigned lesson (28-31), though not printed, should be studied in connection with the printed passage. They summarize the closing events of Jacob's life in Egypt.

Mick's Reply.

Two Irishmen were working on the roof of a building one day when one made a mis-step and fell to the ground. The other leaned over and called, "Are ye dead or alive, Mick?" "I'm alive," said Mick, feebly. "Sure, ye're such a liar I don't know whether to believe you or not." "Well, then, I must be dead," said Mick, "for you would never dare call me a liar if I were alive!"

Thought It Was a Sheath.

"Wife, where is my new silk umbrella cover?"

"I guess there has been a slight mistake," admitted his wife after a few moments. "I sent it to my dressmaker and told her to let it out a trifle over the hips."

It will help those who have Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

There are other "old enemies" similar to the one mentioned in this testimonial. Kidney and Bladder Troubles are always enemies to good health. As soon as you start to take GIN PILLS these ailments begin to disappear. It is the same in cases of Lumbago, Sciatica and like complaints. This latter illustrates the benefit of GIN PILLS.

Winnipeg, Jan. 6th.

"I have been a sufferer from Lumbago for some years past and during Christmas week had a very acute attack which confined me to the house. About the latter part of April, I met your Mr. Hill and mentioned my complaint to him. He advised me to take GIN PILLS. Well Known Ontario Merchant Has Faith Because "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

MR. JAMES DOBSON

BRONTE, ONT., MARCH 1st, 1912.

"Fruit-a-tives has made a complete cure in my case of Rheumatism, that had at least five years standing before I commenced the treatment. The trouble was principally in my right hip and shoulder, the pain from it was almost unendurable. Not being able to sleep on that side, if I chanced to turn on my right side while asleep, the pain would immediately awaken me. This kept up until I started taking "Fruit-a-tives". I started by taking one or two tablets with a large glass of water, in the morning before breakfast and experienced pronounced relief very shortly. After a continued treatment for about six months, I was cured and am now in firstclass health. This, I attribute to my persistent use of "Fruit-a-tives," and I heartily recommend your remedy to any Rheumatic sufferers."
