...fore breakfast is said to be good for the complexion.

Linen can be rendered non-inflammable by washing it in a solution of two ounces of alum dissolved in a gallon of water.

It is best to iron underwear on the wrong side. This makes the surface smooth, and it will not be apt to irritate the skin.

After washing a china silk dress do not hang it out to dry; but roll it up in a towel for half an hour; then iron on the wrong side.

To test linen, moisten the goods with the tip of the tongue. If it is linen the wet spot will immediately show through the other side.

Discolored bronze should be thoroughly cleaned of dust, then apply a mixture of two parts warm water and one part muriatic acid. Wipe dry with a chamois skin.

Apples cut in irregular pieces will cook more quickly in a pie than if sliced, for they do not pack close, as slices do, and so the hot air comes more easily in contact with the fruit and cooking is facilitated.

Cleaning the windows with a little paraffin and hot water makes them shine and keep longer clean. If you have not paraffin at hand a little vinegar and a squeeze of the blue bag will also make window or any glassware beautiful and clean.

For the making of custard sauce beat one egg with a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of sugar, pouring over them a teacupful of boiling milk. Stir in a small saucepan until the sauce slightly thickens and reaches boiling point. Flavor with a drop of vanilla. The custard should be served in a heated sauceboat.

QUEEN BARS GAMBLING CLUB

British Consort Ends Plan for Exclusive Woman's House.

Queen Mary, by reason of her unconquerable aversion to gambling in any form by women, has prevented the establishment of a woman's club in London which, from a social point of view, by far would have outranked any existing woman's club in the city and which in fact would have been a kind of woman's Marlborough Club.

The incident at the same time shows how, in spite of the Queen's strong and constantly demonstrated objection, the society women of England are equally determined not to be deprived of their big or little gambling.

A plan was formulated a short time ago to start a woman's club, membership in which was to be restricted to past and present ladies of the various royal households in England. At first everything pointed to its immediate great success. Nearly every royal lady residing in England promised to join, and a strong body of ladies of the royal households immediately came in.

Of course it was absolutely essential that such a club should have the support of the Queen, as she is the head of the select body from which the members were to be selected.

Lady Agneta Montagu, the organizing secretary of the club, immediately approached Queen Mary as soon as the successful establishment of the club was assured. A couple of weeks ago the Queen wrote to Lady Agneta that she would join the club, but only on the conditions that there should be no card room in it and that no male visitors should be received.

These conditions were made known, and two weeks sufficed to show that they rendered the formation of the club impossible, for of the 150 ladies who formed the original nucleus of the organization 110 have now withdrawn their names. As a result the scheme has been abandoned.

A Matter of Time.

"The Market Man" I think living is getting cheaper. For instance, two years ago them eggs would have cost you 50 per cent. more.

The Customer. Two years ago when these eggs were fresh, they would have been worth more.

Last Resource.

"Darling," he cried, "I can not live without you."

"But," she replied, "my father is bankrupt."

"In that case," he despondently replied, "I guess I'll go and shoot myself."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 14.

Lesson XI.—The Ten Commandments, II.—Exod. 20:12-21.

Golden Text, Luke 10:27.

Verse 12. Honor thy father and thy mother—Since the time of Augustine the Roman Catholic Church, and subsequently also some Protestant churches, have regarded the fifth commandment as heading the second table. The reason for this has been chiefly that this division seemed to make the amount of writing on the two tables more nearly equal. It has been defended also on the ground that the commandment itself is moral rather than religious, referring to a duty toward others rather than toward God. In ancient times respect for parents was more a matter of religious obligation. Hence the earliest grouping of the commandments was, "I to V, religious duties," and "VI to X, moral duties."

That thy days may be long in the land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee—If we are to think of a simpler original form for this commandment, this attached reason for obedience may perhaps be a later amplification. The wording of the commandment in Deuteronomy reads: "Honor thy father and thy mother, as Jehovah thy God commanded thee; that thy days may be long, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee" (Deut. 5. 16). Here the original command of Jehovah and the later reason of expediency are separated by the intervening explanatory clause "as Jehovah thy God commanded thee," which seems to point specifically to an earlier more succinct command to filial obedience.

13. Thou shalt not kill—An appreciation of the sanctity of the human life necessarily precedes a sense of other duties and obligations to our fellow men. Hence the moral precept of this commandment is, as we should expect, incorporated in all ethical codes which man has put into permanent, written form.

14, 15. Not commit adultery—Next to one's regard for the life of his neighbor is his respect for family ties, and this in turn naturally leads to a recognition of the rights of personal ownership of all things belonging to a family household. The next commandment is, therefore, against stealing.

16. Bear false witness—The commandment as it stands refers primarily to outright falsehood and perjury. It does not, however, exclude private calumny, or the more subtle habit of evil speaking against one's neighbor. Later on in the detailed legislation given by Moses to Israel the latter is specifically forbidden in the words: "Thou shalt not take up a false report: put not thy hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness" (Exod. 23. 1).

17. Thou shalt not covet—In undertaking to regulate a man's inner thought life as well as his outer life of action the Mosaic law places itself on a higher level than any other system of laws, ancient or modern. The Decalogue, and especially this commandment, proceeds on the assumption that man is actually free to control his thoughts, and hence is responsible for them as well as for his actions. Thy neighbor's house—If the word "house" be taken generically, then the first clause of this commandment may be taken to cover the entire prohibition intended, the following specific things, such as wife, servant, ox and ass, being added simply as exemplifying all that which is to be understood under the word "house." Hence also the concluding phrase, "nor any thing that is thy neighbor's." In the Deuteronomic version of the commandment the order is slightly different, the commandment reading, "Neither shalt thou covet thy neighbor's wife; neither shalt thou desire thy neighbor's house, his field, or his man-servant, or his maid-servant, his ox, or his ass, or anything that is thy neighbor's."

EUROPEAN GOSSIP

Prince Arthur's House.

Prince Arthur of Connaught has taken Lord Plymouth's house in Mount Street for a number of years. It is a particularly fine Mayfair mansion, Lord Plymouth having spent a great deal of money in improving it, and specially for the display of his art treasures. It has a fine staircase and hall. The neighborhood of Grosvenor House Gardens and the Park offers fine views and more airiness than is enjoyed by the other houses in the street.

Turkey's Policy.

The Turks now confess that the crowding of the Maritza is merely a diplomatic manoeuvre. The object of it is to extort recognition of the new position in Tarnee, but the manoeuvre is not likely to succeed. The Powers have decreed that Turkey shall not retain the reoccupied province, and do not intend to go back on their decision. On the other hand, they do not mean to enforce it. Even Russia, so against the method of the "strong hand." In the long run Turkey will find it worth while to give way of her own accord. The Great Powers have many other ways of enforcing their will without resorting to brute force. At all events that is, I believe, the opinion of the Chancelleries. It is also the universal opinion in quarters usually sympathetic towards Turkey. The retention of Thrace and Adrianople, it is argued, though justifiable, perhaps by right of conquest, and certainly by racial right, would eventually cost Turkey very dear. It would mean the maintenance of a powerful army in Europe, a perpetual menace, perpetual intrigues, and a useless and weakening drain on Turkish resources. Better for her, it is urged, to content herself with the position accorded to her by the nations of Mistress of Constantinople and Guardian of the Straits, with the guarantee only implied, but none the less real—that her Empire in Asia will not be molested. Turkey in Europe has no future, no doubt; but she has not had a fair chance. There is, at least, some hope of fair play for her in Asia. The difference in continents may make all the difference. The three Western Powers—Great Britain, France and Germany—will do all they can to sustain and assist her in Asia, but they will not move a finger on her behalf if she now disputes their authority.

A Public Inquiry Into the Balkan Atrocities.

I understand that, in response to appeals from several Bulgarian quarters for a public inquiry into the extent of and responsibility for the atrocities committed by the belligerents during the second Balkan war, Dr. Butler, president of Columbia University, and one of the trustees of the Carnegie Foundation, has undertaken to organize an International Commission with a view to carrying out this object. So far the following persons have been designated as members of the commission:—Professor Prince, of Columbia University (America); Francis W. Hirst, editor of the Economist (England); Baron d'Estournelles de Corstant (France); Professor Zorn (Germany); Professor Miliukoff (Russia); and Professor Lammasch (Austria). Not all these gentlemen have given their consent yet unconditionally, but the commission is about to meet in Paris to discuss the necessary preliminaries.

Canadian Parliamentary Candidates.

I hear that the Liberals of Sir John Simon's constituency, Walthamstow, London, have found a candidate to take his place when he goes to North-West Manchester. A. M. de Beck, the proprietor and editor of the Canadian News, has been approached, and it is probable that he will be the Liberal candidate. The Conservative candidate will be Harry Symonds, K.C., who is also known in Canada. He was at one time president of the National Agency. It is curious that both the Liberal and the Conservative candidates chosen be prominent Canadians.

Discussion in the Police.

Not only is it becoming more difficult to find recruits for the Metropolitan police force, but those who are already in are very discontented with their position and rates of pay. The best recruits come from the country districts, and contrary to the general supposition, very few are enlisted from among the Army Reserve lists. Town recruits are looked at askance, and always have been so. The reason for the latter is well founded. The townsman not only knows too much, in a sense, and is less tractable to discipline, but he is not so observant as the countryman. He is familiar with the streets and London ways, and is not so interested in what goes on around him as the man from the country, to whom everything is novel. The intelligent countryman, however, is now more inclined to emigrate and the number of resignations of young constables from the force this year would surprise those who know. The men believe, in most cases, come to the conclusion that their opportunities are limited, and that they would do better abroad. In addition to that the work of the police is excessive. Sunday after Sunday, owing to the meetings in the Park and in Trafalgar Square, London, held principally by the Suffragettes, it has not been possible to give them the leave of one day in seven which they were promised. Men are called out for extra duty at these gatherings, and receive no extra pay, while their scanty leisure is eaten up. There is no active movement among the men, but nevertheless the authorities are greatly concerned about the position, for never before have they had to take into the ranks recruits who were not up to a high standard. The continuing good trade has, of course, something to do with it.

The Admiralty's Contracts.

It is stated in quarters which are, as a rule, well informed, that instead of completing the programme of 16 destroyers by ordering three, the Admiralty may purchase three of the Chilian destroyers which are being built at Cowes by J. S. White and Company. These vessels are coal burners. But they are fine sea-going ships, and were designed by Sir Philip Watts, Messrs. White's order was for six, and even if the three indicated are sold to the Admiralty they will still be able to deliver six within the contract time. The Admiralty are also asking prices for propelling machinery for dockyard-built light cruisers.

London, Aug. 30, 1913.

SAWED THROUGH BARS.

One of the Stoney Mountain Desperadoes Tries to Break Jail.

A despatch from Kingston says: That a bold attempt was made by Frank Jones, one of the Stoney Mountain desperadoes in the penitentiary, to gain his freedom, became known on Wednesday. Guards making their usual inspection found that Jones had succeeded in sawing through the bars of his cell. Just how the prisoner was able to do this, the penitentiary officials refuse to say, but it is understood that an investigation is being made. Jones was one of the gang which made such a sensational escape from the penitentiary in March, 1912. Bonner, Kelly and Brown are the other members of the Western gang, who were transferred here, and all have given considerable trouble.

DEATH FREES "BILL" MINER.

He Died at the Georgia State Prison Farm.

A despatch from Milledgeville, Georgia, says: Death has freed "Bill" Miner, notorious robber and jail breaker, from his last prison term. His picturesque career, which included clashes with the laws of more than a score of states and several Canadian Provinces, ended on Wednesday at the Georgia State Prison Farm.

His Reproof.

Mrs. Vereleigh (coming home at eleven)—Are the dear children all right? I haven't set eyes on them since morning.

Her husband—Huh! You're a nice one to air your views! Better stay at home and view your own.

DIED FROM STARVATION.

Terrible Story of Sufferings of Russian Fisherman.

A terrible narrative of the death by starvation of over 100 fish-curers and their families in Nova Zembla, Russian Islands in the Arctic Ocean, is told in a St. Petersburg telegram to the Petit Parisien.

Last winter was very severe, and the fishermen were unable to secure fresh supplies of food at the usual period, and the sea being frozen, it was impossible to obtain fish. A scientific expedition visiting the islands found the skeletons of the fishermen and their wives and children lying in the open, their huts having been wrecked by the wind. Not a scrap of food was left. Three of the dead women still carried their infants in their arms.

In one hut was found a diary written by one of the fishermen. The last entries read:

"We have no more provisions and we cannot secure any fish. A vessel seen approaching to-day, but it was only an illusion. It is terrible to see our children dying of hunger. They come and cry to us for food. We are reduced to eating our woollen garments. We are still keeping on hoping for help.

"All the children are dead. We are now four fishermen living and two women. Our sufferings are indescribable. Two of the men have just died. They tried to stave off their hunger by eating the flesh of their dead comrades."

The diary ceases: "I, Geoffi, am the last survivor. I am very feeble. I am trembling, and my eyes are failing."

A MESSAGE FROM A WOMAN TO WOMEN

"Every Woman Should Take "Fruit-a-tives"

LAKELET, ONT., MAY 12th, 1911

"Kindly publish this letter of mine if you think it will benefit other women who might be afflicted with the diseases I have had in the past, but am now, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives", completely cured of. It is my firm belief that every woman should take "Fruit-a-tives" if she wants to keep herself in good health.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as "Nerves" or severe Nervousness. This Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache, for which, I am constantly taking doctors' medicine without any permanent relief. Constipation was also a source of great trouble to me and for which the Doctors said "I would have to take medicine all my life", but "Fruit-a-tives" banished all these troubles and now, I am a well woman"
