Thrilling Run of "The Mono" Recalled

was 3:40 p.m., and he had twenty minutes to cover less than five miles.

Down the Big Grade.
Since that day no locomotive has sped down the grade at Murray's Cut with such reckless speed. Even the engineer began to feel a thrill of uncertainty. Could he stop the engine before they reached the end of the steel? Four hundred yards ahead was Boyd's wharf, and a hundred yards beyond that was the end of the line. Slowly David shoved over the throttle. With the instinct of the trained engineer, he was conscious of a slight response, and it gave him confidence. Again the throttle moved and again speed slackened. Then he threw "her" right over. The fireman rang the bell vigorously and great clouds of escaping steam almost enveloped the Mono as she came to a standstill at her destination, with a record that may never again be equalled on the division. The engineer looked at his watch. It was 3:48 p.m., and the distance—122 miles—had been covered in two hours and forty-eight minutes. Out at the end of the wharf the steamer Africa was waiting. The pursuer with a bundle of manifests hurried aboard, the lines were cast off, the captain sounded the engine room bells, and she sailed for the north ON TIME.

Liquor Cases.—Magistrates Traynor and McMullen held police court in the town hall on Monday. In the case of R. Wilson, who was charged with being intoxicated, he pleaded guilty and his evidence was taken to discover where the liquor was procured on March 5th. Geo. Fisher, staying at the McCullough House (since left for the West), Charles Montgomery and Nassau Agnew were the parties named, as having supplied the booze. Village Constable Hemphill was present in the McCullough House and had a drink of whiskey from Fisher at the same time. A fine of $20 (the minimum) was imposed on Wilson. The case against Constable Hemphill was dismissed. His evidence went to show that although he drank the whiskey he did not pay for it. In view of evidence brought out at the trial Constable Hemphill's plain duty, as we see it, is to resign, which, we learn, he is intending to do.

The C.P.R. Co. got active last week in endeavoring to stop trespassing on their property in Dundalk. A detective was on duty a couple of days warning people off the tracks. The only information that was laid before a Magistrate was that of Mr. Fred Nixon, who was charged with trespass on Sunday previous to the detective's arrival. Fred's home in right beside the track and his place of business is on the opposite side and up three or four rods. For the past 34 years Fred figures he has taken the short cut about 75000 times. He acknowledged the trespass, paid Magistrate Traynor a fine of $1.00 and costs and considers he has had about 700 short trips and a great many steps saved for each cent of expenditure. In future he will take the longer walk around by the street for the benefit of his health.—Herald.

When John Evans visited Toronto from Dundalk, Ont., he had a good bunch of money with him, and proceeded to celebrate his arrival by imbibing a few drinks. Whether they were few or many he soon felt the effects of the liquor and tumbled into the gutter. Dissatisfied with his appearance, he purchased another suit, and following a precedent recently established by a visitor from the north went to make a change of apparel in a laneway. Just then Frank Maguire came on the scene and he promptly annexed the man's pants, beating it precipitately.
He was subsequently arrested for drunkenness, and Evans having furnished the thief's description to the police, Maguire was picked out by Detective Newton. Out of $240 only $80 was recovered.

"What became of the rest of the money?" asked the Magistrate.
"I got a pair of shoes, that is all I had," replied the prisoner.
"If you are remanded for a week do you think you could remember where it was?" asked the Magistrate.
"If you could get it back it would make a considerable difference in your sentence. Think hard between now and the 3rd of April, and give the police any information you can." You are remanded till that date.—Toronto Telegram.

The crib some thirty-five feet long by twenty feet wide by seventeen feet in height was constructed, filled with stone and sunk in a trifle less than seven days. This appears to be a record for local harbour and speaks well for the business-like manner in which Mr. Hurst goes about his work.—Herald.

The funeral of the late Mrs. M. E. Walker was held on Thursday last, and was very large, over seventy rigs being in the procession. The body was conveyed to the Methodist church, where an appropriate service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Wallace, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. J. J. Wilkinson, of Holland Centre, and which interment took place in the public cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. John Love, David Heathers, W. J. Walker, Oswald Walker, Thos. Anderson and H. Bracey. Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were Messrs. Thos. and Geo. Lindsay and Will Gray, of Shelburne; Mrs. A. Walker, (Chatsworth); Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Robinson, Dundalk.

The Hard Times Social given by the Presbyterian Ladies Aid in Amaranth last Wednesday evening was a most sociable and enjoyable event. The costumes of those who attended ranged all the way from the sublime to the ridiculous. The gathering was as one animated, "a cross between a family piano parade and a family circus." The most ludicrous in the programme were many of the costumes worn, while others bore out to fullest extent a representation of hard times. Dr. Campbell and H. C. Duff were appointed judges to determine the best or worst costume in the gathering, and Dr. McArthur and Mrs. B. Smith were decided upon, and formally tendered a vote of thanks to the former, also being called upon to preside during a pleasing program of music and dialogue afterwards followed. This consisted of piano solos by Misses Clark and Mabel Plowes, vocal solo by the latter, Quartet "Mortgaging the Farm," by Mrs. A. M. Brown, Mrs. J. A. M. Arthur, Miss Lollita Brown, Mr. J. B. Dundas participated in Quartets by Mr. Dundas, Kontner; Mrs. Brown and Miss Lita Brown; and a playlet entitled "Gossip" by six young ladies. Miss Ethel Armstrong, Miss Dolita Brown, Miss M. Howard and Miss Laura M. "God Save the King" closed the program, after which a table lunch was served. The social proved to be a splendid success, every particular, a gratifying net being taken in it as evident by the number who went to trouble to provide costumes for the event. The proceeds, including fines which were imposed on the "regulators" amounted to $42
