HIT THE SPOT.

Knocked Out Tea and Coffee Ails.

There's a good deal of satisfaction in hitting upon the right thing to rid one of the varied and constant ailments caused by tea and coffee drinking.

"Ever since I can remember," writes one woman, "my father has been a lover of his coffee, but the continued use of it so affected his stomach that he could scarcely eat at all."

Mother had coffee-headache, and dizziness, and if I drank coffee for breakfast I would taste it all day and usually go to bed with a headache." (Tea is just as injurious as coffee, because both contain the drug, caffeine.)

One day father thought home a big of Postum recommended by our grocer. Mother made it according to directions on the box, and it just "hit the spot."

As it was a fancy dance the revelers at first thought he was a strange guest, but soon discovered their mistake and ran for the doors.

That was at least ten years ago, and Postum has, from that day to this, been a "standing" order of father's grocery bill.

When I married, my husband was a great coffee drinker, although he admitted that it hurt him.

I mentioned Postum to him, and he did not like the taste of it. I told him I could make it taste all right. He smiled and said, "try it." The result was a success, he won't have any more but Postum.

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. Made in the cup, with hot water, no boiling. 30c and 50c tins.

Deaf People Can Hear. SIR ROBERT LAIRD BORDEN.

But Not the Way Others Do—Feel Vibrations.

Sir Robert Laird Borden, K.C.M.G., is a Nova Scotian of United Empire Loyalist stock, and the fact is the key to his character. The Nova Scotian United Empire Loyalist is very hard-headed and very long-headed, and there is not a harder or longer head in politics than the present Prime Minister of Canada.

He has a cool judgment and a family for foreign which make him a formidable rival and a dangerous opponent. He has no imagination and no emotion. His intellectual power is solidly massed. He is a genuine Nova Scotian and Britisher in his adherence to the pro-safeties of politics.

Sir Robert is not a pliable being. He does not try to please for the sake of pleasing. He has the ability to go his own way without considering the feelings of others.

Nova Scotians, more or less, seem to possess this quality of self-isolation. They do not deliberately tread upon corns, but they are not easily wheeled or managed. They have a preference for going straight ahead and cutting through obstacles rather than circumventing them. If they are confronted with insuperable difficulties, they hide in their time without falling into a panic or a passion. They are unimperishable people. They know how to wait. Sir Robert's career is now an illustration of his Nova Scotian Loyalist patient. He knows how to wait. He knows how to control the petulance of ambition. He has learned to avoid those errors which disqualify a statesman. He is no flexible opportunist, but on the other hand he is a master of non-committal tactics which will go to a place where the latter gets married, but not before.

Some of the devices employed by deaf persons to warn them of the ringing of the door bell are most dangerous. One household has a rubber ball suspended from the ceiling of the living room, and the ringing of the bell causes this to swing back and forth. One man has a flag that drops when the bell rings. Another has the bell attached to an electric lamp so that it lights up when the bell-push is pressed.

A New Yorker has an alarm clock attached to the foot of a brass bed. He feels the vibrations when the alarm goes off just as plainly as if he could hear them.

He'll Wait.

Little Johnny had been naughty all day. At last, to cap the climax, he slapped his small sister. When father came home from the office the mother told him of his son's misdeeds. "The next time you tease your sister you go to bed without your dinner," the father said sternly. "The kiddie sat in silence for a few moments. Then, all of a sudden, he turned to his father.

"The next time I want to hit you I'll wait until after dinner," he remarked.

After John.

"John, do you practice regularly on the piano when I am away at the office?" "Yes, father." "Every day?" "Yes, father." "And how long did you practice today?" "Three hours to-day, father, and two-and-a-half hours yesterday." "But, John—"

"Yes, father." "Next time you practice be sure and unlock the piano. I'll give you the key." It's been in my pocket the last fortnight. Now, mother, will you bring me the strap?"

HIT THE SPOT.

Knocked Out Tea and Coffee Ails.

It is these homespun virtues that have helped Mr. Borden to his way to the highest office in the gift of the Canadian people.

It is a notable fact that he has built up his prestige by appealing to the central mass of moderate men. And whatever may be said by heated partisans, it is certain that Canada, as in other English-speaking countries, the moderate men are, after all, generally in the majority. There is never a permanent majority of extremists. They may supply the driving power for the political machine, but it is the moderate man who controls it.

Another Borden quality is tact. The Conservative chieftain knows how to keep his own counsel. He is the embodiment of reserve and reticence. He never thinks aloud. This gift of silence is often the cause of irritation to his more emotional followers. Yet Mr. Borden owes a great deal of his success to his power of holding his tongue and saying nothing he is not forced to say. He is not an orator in any sense of the word. In this he is the antithesis of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The Liberal leader is far superior in all the arts that dazzle and fascinate the popular imagination.

Sir Wilfrid on the platform can be irresistibly moving. He can capture the emotions of any audience, and melt the most obdurate antagonist into momentary admiration.

Borden does not try to melt or move. If he did he would be unsuccessful. He addresses his argument solely and wholly to the reason.

Pigeon, V. Davis, patent solicitors, Montreal, report that 171 Canadian patents were issued for the week ending June 16th, 1913, of which were granted to Americans, 21 to residents of foreign countries, and 8 to residents of Great Britain and colonies.

13 were of Ontario, 8 of Quebec, 8 of Manitoba, 2 of British Columbia, 2 of Alberta, and 2 of New Brunswick.

learning in his native province, and brought up in the environment of a law office, he was taught to value clear thinking more highly than emotional exuberance, to aspire after balance rather than originality. And it was while being trained to the law that Mr. Borden developed his power of mastering facts. His mind seems to have developed into an amazingly efficient machine for the digestion of practical politics.

Whatever mistakes he has made in the region of emotion, imagination and sentiment, he has walked with sure footsteps in the region of facts.

On the morning of Sept. 22, 1911, he faced a task that would have submerged most men. But the mantle of his great predecessors had fallen upon worthy shoulders. In one session he convinced the skeptical and delighted his friends. The diverse elements in the ranks behind him were brought together, factionism and business sense.
