ROMANCE OF WAR IS DEAD

THE SPADE IS AS IMPORTANT AS THE RIFLE.

No Battle Flags and No Charging Columns on Modern Battlefields.

The glory and the romance of war is dead. It has become chiefly a matter of cold calculation, a bloody business of long distance slaughter, with no longer any opportunity for showing personal heroism," says

Henry M. Hyde, in the Chicago tribune.

Never again can a Napoleon, looking down from a hill top, direct the movements of his army of 300,000 men as it manoeuvres under his eye on the plain below.

The modern general, directing a battle line 150 miles long—such as the Japanese had at Mukden—will never be within sight of his troops.

Yama, the Japanese chief of staff, was fifteen miles to the rear when his great battle was fought.

Wires Displace Couriers.

Never again will a courier, bearing orders from headquarters to division and corps commanders, have to find his way through the country, as he did in the days of Dr. Hamilton's Pink Pills.

The latter still does not however represent the whole of the value of the week.

All the guns were salved, all and a good deal of other valuable gear.

The gladiators had eleven and seven gyroscopic torpedoes costing about £1,000 each, so the very considerable deduction in the loss of the ship itself, was made from the apparent loss in the cost of building it, round figure £25,000.

By Ingenuity.

There are cases in which ships have been saved through the inge-niousness of the salvors. Take for example, the White Star liner

Imperial, which was salved, and joined together again after being broken in two. That was indeed a marvel in shipping surgery, but it is not the only case of the kind.

Some years ago the German steamer Milwaukee, which went astray off the Aberdeen coast, was deliberately broken into two halves, as it was impossible to recover the whole ship.

The two parts were resting on rocks when the solid half along with the valuable engines hoisted

was closed up, and made a watertight.

Then it was hauled off and towed

10 miles to the Tyne, where the shipbuilders took it in hand.

It became a real "mosh" similar to one that was left on the rocks but the solid half along with

was closed up, and made

a watertight.

A Three-Year Old.

Mother," said a three-year-old girl, "I don't think you know about bringing up children."

"What makes you think that, dear?" Because you always send me to bed when I'm not a sleepy, and make me get up when

I am."
