HAVE PRETTY HAIR

Thick, Soft, Fluffy, and no Dandruff—Use Parisian Sage.

If your hair is losing its natural color, coming out and splitting, or lacks that enviable softness, gloss and beauty, do not despair—pretty hair is largely a matter of care. If it is too thin make it grow. If it is harsh and brittle soften it up and fascinate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too oily and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp with Parisian Sage—all dandruff disappears, falling hair and itching head cease, your hair is quickly beautiful.

Parisian Sage, sold by W. Turner & Co., and at all drug counters, is just what you need—a large bottle costs but 50 cents. It surely makes the hair lustrous and grows twice as abundant. You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage. 2

Care and Abuse of Farm Machinery

Recent investigations by the Conservation Commission reveal some very interesting facts regarding the effect of care, or neglect, as the case may be, upon the life of machinery on the farm. Between 90 and 95 farms, divided into three districts, were visited in each of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In Saskatchewan, out of 94 farmers visited by the Commission's representative, 76 leave all their implements out of doors. On 73 of the farms, there were no implement sheds of any description. On 21 of the farms, sheds large enough to cover a part of the implements were found, in most cases this being only a buggy or a democrat, but not on one single farm was the machinery all housed. Not one farmer was found who painted his implements to protect them from the weather.

In Manitoba only 14 out of 94 keep their machinery under cover during winter, while 44 claim to keep a part of it inside. On 34 of the Manitoba farms no provision whatever is made for protecting implements, and only four claim to have done any painting.

In the three districts visited in Alberta, mixed farming is carried on quite extensively, making more barn room available, so that implements are more likely to be protected, but even here, 37 out of the 92 visited leave all machinery out of doors.

In one district in Ontario where 40 farmers were visited, every man housed his implements during winter, although none of these men do any painting.

In the Ontario district visited where the implements are housed, the average life of the binder was found to be between 16 and 17 years. Many binders were seen which were in good running order after cutting 20 seasons' crops.

In Saskatchewan and Manitoba, where so much of the machinery is left out of doors, the average life of the binder is given by the farmers as about 7 years, which is less than half that of the binder protected from the weather. Many binders do not last as long as seven years. One farmer near Moosomin, Sask., who, after 12 years, was retiring from the farm, held an auction sale. His binder, after cutting 12 crops sold for $80, or 50 per cent. of the original cost, and his other machinery at proportionately high prices. It had all been well housed and the necessary painting and repairing had been done to keep it in good order. On a neighboring farm a binder which had cut only three crops, but which had been neglected, and had stood out of doors, was being relegated to the scrap heap and a new one was being purchased.

An implement shed costs money, but if its use will double or treble the length of time the machinery will last, it is a good investment. Farmers often say that they can not afford to build a shed. The truth is, they really cannot afford to be without one. Apart from the additional power necessary for operation, the depreciation on unhoused machinery on the average sized farm is so great as to amount to much more than the cost and upkeep of an implement shed. The binder works for only a short time during the year, while machinery in a shop works the whole year through and lasts proportionately many times longer. It is simply a matter of care. The life of a machine extends in direct ratio to the care it receives, and abuse and neglect will shorten the life of any mechanism. The manufacturer is not responsible for the care of the machinery after it is sold. This rests entirely with the farmer, and as a common-sense business proposition he should look after his own interests sufficiently to house his implements and thus save the thousands of dollars wasted annually in unnecessary depreciation.

J. C. Rockwell's "Sunny South" Co.

There are few more popular theatrical attractions on the road than the J. C. Rockwell "Sunny South" company, which will be seen in the Armouries, Markdale, Wednesday evening, Nov. 4th. This company, although billed under its old title, is, nevertheless, presenting a han new performance from the rise to the final fall of the curtain. This season Mr. Rockwell claims to have the newest, freshest, most artistic and thoroughly equipped colored show ever sent on tour. He backs his claim and arrests public attention by presenting a musical performance that has more original ideas and up-to-the-minute novelties than any similar organization. As on its former visits it will be found to be clean to a fault and during the entire performance there is not a line, an action nor an insinuation to which exception can be taken. The fun, which will be handed over the footlights, is all new and needs no arrow to point the way to the laughs. It is bristling with new, novel and entertaining features and it is brim full of laughable situations, charming musical numbers and excellent specialties, which will make the audience sit up and take notice. It is a musical show, wedded to the most tuneful music one would care to listen to, full of ginger and life, with not a dull moment from beginning to end. A good sprinkling of new songs has been made in the performance and with the atmosphere being of the sort where the audience leaves the theatre whistling its latest song hits, the engagement can be looked forward to with much pleasure by those who attend the theatre to laugh and enjoy themselves.

The organization is accompanied by a solo concert band and a superb orchestra. The band will head the "Koontown" parade, taking place at noon.

The prices of admission have been placed at 35 and 50 cents. Seats are now selling at Stephenson's Jewelry Store.

Early History of Grey County

The following well-written essay on some events in the early history of the County of Grey won first prize at the Meaford and St. Vincent Agricultural Society's Fall Fair. Miss Marjory Drummond, the authoress, is to be congratulated upon her efforts which prove her to be a scholar of exceptional ability, her work comparing most favourably with that of children of a much maturer age.

Grey County was first inhabited by Indians. Relics have been found at Craigleith, showing that at one time it had been an Indian village. Stones cut in odd shapes by the Indians have been found as near Meaford as Workman's Creek.

The first settler came to Grey County in 1830. He was a surveyor named Charles Rankin. In 1834 Mr. Rankin made a clearing on lot 37, con. 11, and planted potatoes, which in the fall produced three hundred bushels.

The second settler in the County was Captain Workman. He was a retired officer. He took a large grant of land about a thousand acres. This land was later owned by C. R. Sing, Squire Corley and John Londry also settled in 1834. The wives of Captain Workman and Squire Corley were the first white women to live in the county.

Collingwood was the first of the sixteen townships to be surveyed but the second to be settled, the time being the early part of 1834. Collingwood was first named "Alta" on account of its being, at the time of its survey, the highest known piece of land in Ontario. The range of hills we find there are called the Blue Mountains. This name was given to them by the early voyagers who passed by on their fur-trading expeditions across the bay. The greatest height of the hills produced a bluish misty hue, and the name "Blue Mountains" was given to them.

St. Vincent Township was next surveyed in 1834. It was named "Zero" because of its supposed nearness to the frost. These names were changed later on, and most of the townships of Grey County were named after some "English Celebrity" by the officials at Crown Lands Office.

The site of Owen Sound, our county town, was chosen before the Rebellion of 1837. It was called "Sydenham," the pioneer settler being John Telfer. One of the early settlers of Sydenham Township was the late James Gardner, of Meaford.

A great many of the very earliest settlers came from England, Scotland and North of Ireland and settled near Meaford. Among these were William Whitelaw, who came in 1834, Robert Mitchell in 1835, James Robertson in 1836, William Batty in 1848, Thos. Mackie, and others.

When St. Vincent was surveyed a block of two hundred acres was reserved for a village. This village was laid out in lots twelve years later by a man named Gibbard. St. Vincent Township was named after Earl St. Vincent, and this village was called Meaford after the Earl's county seat, Old Sarum.

Britain is Vast War Camp.

Splendid Spirit Shown.—Everybody Gives or Does Something to Forward Cause of Allies.

New York, Oct. 24.—When a week ago I left England I had just returned from France, and had motored many miles in both countries, says Richard Harding Davis, in the Tribune. Everywhere in this greatest crisis of the century I found the people showing the most undaunted and splendid spirit. To their common enemy they are presenting an unbroken front. The civilian is playing his part just as loyally as the soldier; the women as bravely as the men.

SACRIFICES GREAT AND SMALL.

Everyone in England and France is making sacrifices great and small. As long ago as the middle of September it was so cold along the Aisne that I have seen the French, sooner than move away from the open fires they had made, risk the falling shells. Since then it has grown much colder and two weeks ago Kitchener issued an invitation to the English people to send in what blankets they could spare for the army in the field and in reserve. The idea was to dye the blankets khaki, and then turn them over to the supply department in one week, so eagerly did the people respond to this appeal, Kitchener had to publish a card stating that no more blankets were needed. He had received over half a million.

WITHOUT PRECEDENT.

The reply to Kitchener's appeal for recruits was as prompt and generous. The men came so rapidly that the standard for enlistment was raised. That is, I believe, in the history of warfare without precedent. Men who are not accepted as recruits are enrolled as special constables. They are those who could not without facing ruin neglect their business. They have signed on as policemen, and each night for four hours patrol the posts of the regular bobbies who have gone to the front.

Lord Roberts called upon all racing men, yachtsmen and big game shots to send him for the use of the officers at the front their field glasses. The response was amazingly generous.

Other people gave their pens. The men whose names are best known to you in British literature are at the service of the Government, and at this moment are writing exclusively for the Foreign Office. They are engaged in answering the special pleading of the Germans and in writing monographs, appeals for recruits, explanations of why England is at war. They do not sign what they write. They are, of course, not paid for what they write.

STAGE HELPS.

One theatre is giving all the money taken in at the door to the Red Cross; all of them admit men in uniform free or at half price, and a long list of actors have gone to the front. Among them are several who are well known in New York. Robert Loraine has received an officer's commission in the Royal Flying Corps, and Guy Standing in the navy. Gerald Du Maurier has organized a reserve battalion of actors, artists and musicians.

There is not a day passed that the most prominent members of the theatrical world are not giving their services free to benefit performances in aid of Belgian refugees, Red Cross societies or to some one of the funds under royal patronage.

Every one is helping. Each day the King and Queen and Princess Mary review troops or visit the wounded in some hospital; and the day before Zeppelin, while passing Buckingham Palace, I watched the young Prince of Wales change the guard. In a businesslike manner he was listening to the sentries repeat their orders; and in turn a young sergeant, also in a most businesslike manner, was in whispers coaching the boy officer in the proper manner to guard the home of his royal parents.

HEROES AT HOME.

The number of English women who have left their homes that the Red Cross may have the use of them for the wounded would fill a long roll of honor. Some give an entire house, like Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who has loaned to the wounded Oliveden, one of the best known and most beautiful places on the Thames. Others can give only a room. But all over England the convalescents have been billeted in private houses and made nobly welcome.

Even the children of England are helping. The Boy Scouts, one of the most remarkable developments of this decade, has in this war scored a triumph of organization. This is equally true of the Boy Scouts in Belgium and France. In England military duties of the most serious nature have been entrusted to them. On the east coast they have taken the place of the coast guards, and all over England they are patrolling railroad junctions, guarding bridges and carrying despatches.

JOHN W. FORD

Blot On Their Honor.

London, Oct. 17.—A despatch from Pretoria says: "At a meeting of commandants representing all the Free State north of Bloemfontein held at Kroonstad a resolution was unanimously adopted denouncing the rebellion started in the north-west of the Cape provinces by Col. Maritz as a blot on the honor of the Free State. The resolution pledged the fullest support of the commandants to the Government, and requested a mobilization of the burghers to crush the rebellion. The action taken by the Kroonstad meeting is considered significant. Hitherto the people of the Free State were lukewarm regarding the campaign against the Germans."

A Sheep Ranch.

Mr. Willis Kent, Dyers Bay, is laying the foundation of a big sheep ranch. He has purchased a large tract of land, and is securing one hundred ewes this fall just as an experiment, and will buy heavily later if successful. With good luck, and at the present prices, there should be big money in this investment. The peninsula is most suitably adapted for sheep and cattle ranches and we will not be surprised if others follow his example. Ex-Reeve Gillies, Thornbury, is giving the matter careful consideration.

Died in California.

Word was received by relatives at Owen Sound recently of the death at Passadina, Cal., of Mr. Hugh Reid, a former well-known Annan boy, and the fourth son of the late Hugh Reid, for many years Treasurer of the township of Sydenham. Death was due to the hardening of the arteries. Deceased went to California about twenty years ago. He leaves a widow and two brothers, Mr. John Reid, of Valigo, Cal., and Mr. James Reid of Denver, Col., and one sister Mrs. George Campbell, of Carman, Man.
