Or, the Belle of the Season.

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

"Oh, Ida, can you lend me a clean collar?" she asked, in a staccato whisper, and with a glance which was intended to be the question mark. "I don't know," answered Ida. "You've heard me speak of my mother's collars, haven't you?"

"I have," answered Ida, "but I don't think I'll lend you one. You'll have to do without for a few days."

"Oh, I am not, indeed," she said, "but I don't want to be without a clean collar for a week. You'll have to be good and lend me one, won't you?"

"I'm sure you'll be good and lend me one," answered Ida, "but I don't think I'll lend you one. You'll have to do without for a few days."

Cookies, Rolls, Bread.

Sugar Cookies.—Two pounds sugar, one cupful butter, one egg, one cupful clear cream, one teaspoon vanilla extract, one teaspoonful baking powder, flour to roll soft. Mix as for cake, beating soda into the cream until it foams. Roll as soft as possible and sprinkle sugar over the top and bake in very slow oven. If the dough is allowed to stand over night, the rolling pin will be well floured and the dough will be easier to handle and a better cookie will result.

Puff Pastry.—Grate two large potatoes, add one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon salt and one-half pint boiling water. Stir until smooth like starch. Soak one yeast cake in a half cup of lukewarm water. When dissolved, add to potato mixture and let it cool. Then add the yeast mixture and one pint of lukewarm water, two large table-spoons of lard, one-half cup of sugar and flour to make a soft dough. Let this rise about three hours, or until three times its bulk. Let rise again until it is trebled. Work down again, then knead on board with rolling pin and cut into rounds with a biscuit cutter. Press through centre with back of silver knife, butter one-half with melted butter and fold over like a pocket. Let rise until light and bake in moderate oven. This will make two and one-half dozen rolls.

Colony Bread.—Two pounds light bread sponge, four ounces melted butter, yolks of four eggs, four ounces sugar, one-half cup milk, four loaves to make a soft dough, six loaves for bread. One cup of raisins or currants, if desired. Mix and beat well and let stand one-half to one hour before baking. This makes two square cake pans. Put on the brushed tops melted butter and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon when the dough is about half raised. Bake in a moderate oven for about twenty minutes.

White Nut Bread.—One cup of white flour, two cups Graham flour, one cup sugar, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one-half cup nut meats. Mix thoroughly and bake one hour in a very slow oven.

White Nut Bread.—Two eggs, one cup sugar, one cup sweet milk, one heaping tablespoon of butter, two cups flour, one-half cup chopped nut meats, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, level teaspoon of cinnamon, a little nutmeg. Mix equal sugar and butter until smooth, add spices and nuts, then milk and flour alternately. Beat well and bake in slow oven forty-five to fifty minutes.

Household Hints.
Dip French fried potatoes in cornmeal before frying.
Soup should be bought in quantities; remove the wrapper and allow it to dry.
To remove lard from the fingers, dampen a sulphur match and rub the stains.
If cream proves too thin to whip, add the white of an egg before beginning to whip.
If the fine lining of a refrigerator looks shabby it can be cleaned and made look like new.
The efficient housekeeper knows that sharp knives save time, patience and give better results than dull ones.
Use a little ammonia in water to wash white paint, but no soap. This has the advantage of not dulling the surface.
In using washing soda, it should always be dissolved in hot water before adding to the clothes.
Scolded satin slippers may be dyed with the ordinary powdered dye, mixed with gasoline. Apply with a clean sponge.
If you are frying onions pour a little vinegar into the frying pan, let it get hot, and it will remove all smell from the pan.
Many people know how to sauté, but few know how to sauté properly. If you are sautéing, first fry the food in oil, then sauté in milk over night.

GERMAN SAVANTS AS WAR CRITICS.

By Chas. M. Bier, Denver, Colo.

Recently there has appeared in the U.S.A. a carefully prepared publication, signed by Germany's well-known scientists and professors in her leading colleges, presenting Germany's reasons for going to war, and intended to counteract the prevailing belief here that the Kaiser is alone responsible.

This pedagogic effort of the self-styled savants of Germany has been noted by a British aggregation of men equally noted and learned, and for more calm and deliberate, who, unlike the Germans, have not scorned to look into public documents, reports, and declarations of Germany's leading civic officers, and who riddled the claims made that the Kaiser is a very mild and child-like creature, loving peace and domesticity, and above all, like innocence.

If the case as made in this publication is the best these vaunted savants are capable of presenting on behalf of Germany, then surely she has suffered tremendously since the beginning of the war in her reputation as a seat of wisdom and the abode of scientific inquiry into the truth of things.

A more slipshod, superficial investigation could scarcely be imagined, and yet it is precisely the German teachers of today, who they imagine they are allowing suspicion to creep upon the American mind to accept what they have to offer, and preparing a most determined opposition on this side of the water, and so far have utterly failed to change American public opinion in the slightest degree.

They offer no evidence and cite no recognized facts in support of their contentions, much less is there any thing produced of a philosophical character or a critical examination of recent occurrences. Logic seems to be a thing unknown to these so-called savants, but rhetoric is their strong card. The statements of the Allies are thrust aside without ceremony as unbelievable by them, simply because they are made by the Allies.

No reputation is deemed necessary, the assumption being that the Germans alone are capable of telling the truth and that all that comes from elsewhere is false and unworthy of belief. The moral dimensions of things is completely eclipsed by the wave of patriotism that has swept over Germany.

They call their production an "Appeal to the Civilized World," published by 93 German savants, and bears the names of her most distinguished scientists, such as Haeckel, Eichen, Hundspicker, Sumner, and many others.

The appeal is discreditable to the intelligence of these men, and indicates that while it was probably signed by the men whose names it bears, very little attention has been given to it by most of them.

The English in which it is expressed is highly unique and grotesque, indicating that it was not the product of the combined efforts of the writers, whose names are subscribed to it. But, rather, the composition of some ill-bred, uneducated enthusiast who has succeeded in securing the signatures probably by false representations of what it contained.

One example must suffice but from it the rest can be judged. Here it is: "The iron mouth of events has proved the untruth of the ferocious German defeat, consequently misrepresentation and calumny are all the more eagerly sought by the press." The logic of this appeal is no less conspicuous by its absence. It is not true that the following extractions are neutral Belgium. It has been proved that France and England had resolved on such a trespass, and it has likewise been proved that Belgium had agreed to their doing so. It would have been suicide of our part not to have been deceived.

The following sentence is found in a paragraph of the very thing they address in the last sentence. These men, wise above their generation, are contented with making unsupported assertions and offer no proof whatever that England and France were about to trespass upon Belgian soil, with Belgian consent. It would not be a trespass to do it if Belgium consented.

But France, England and France had in contemplation such a trespass as claimed (but not proved), it would be no justification for Germany to violate the terms of a treaty which she had solemnly signed. How shocking to religion and good morals to assume that of anybody was going to commit rape and murder-Belgian neutrality Germany has a right to be first at the blood.

These moral teachers form the Fatherland might better fall back upon the high German argument, used by the German Chancellor, that he preferred to follow the law of military necessity than that laid down in a "mere scrap of paper," otherwise known as a treaty.

We are next informed by these 93 men of light and learning from the land of beer, that "were it not for German Militarism civilization

PLEASE LEAVE THE GATE AJAR.

As the western sun was setting upon a forest old, its rays shone on a lady who touched her hair with gold. Just a little woodland will rose, yet one of rarest worth. A father's treasure, his only joy on earth.

He came from work that moment and took her in his arms. "You're tired sweetheart, let's go to bed," he said, "but don't you close the gate. Let me play a little longer." "No, my dear, I'm tired," she answered, "then I'll come." "But daddy, promise you won't close the gate."

Chorus:
Please leave the gate ajar, Dad. I'm coming soon, you see. I'm sure you recall how mamma would leave it ajar for me. I'm such a little girl, I can't reach so far. I close when my games are over.

So please leave the gate ajar. While the little girl was waiting for evening for her dad. His hand came through the forest with faces grave and sad. "Lays, your father wants to see me," they take you right to see me. They gently told her, while their eyes grew dim. "Within an hour," he whispered, "they say I've got to go." "Take me," she cried. "No, Nell, it is too far." "Then she said, "When you see mamma just say I'm coming soon." But don't forget to leave the gate ajar.

SEVERE PAINS AROUND THE HEART

Are Nearly Always Caused by Stomach Trouble

Don't let a pain in the region of the heart lead you into the belief that it is a heart disease. It is often a pain in the stomach, caused by indigestion or some other ailment of the digestive system. The heart is a muscle and it is not its duty to contract and relax itself unless it is properly nourished and rested. If it is not, it will be weakened and it will be unable to perform its duty. This will result in a pain in the region of the heart, which is often mistaken for a heart disease.
