

On the Farm

Foot and Mouth Disease
The disease affects cattle principally, but all cloven-footed animals are susceptible, so that swine, sheep and goats are sometimes stricken with the disease. Humans sometimes contract the infected by drinking milk from infected animals, or from handling animals.

Foot and mouth disease is remarkable for the swiftness with which it spreads. The disease is spread by contact, and any object that has been contaminated with the discharge from the sick animals may convey the infection to healthy animals. The germs of the disease may be carried on the shoes or clothing, by vehicles, or the hoofs of animals, by dogs, cats or birds.

The disease is not necessarily fatal, although a small percentage of animals may die. One attack of the disease does not confer permanent immunity. An animal may have the disease two or three times. Affected animals usually recover without any treatment.

The most prominent symptoms are a high fever, loss of appetite, and the formation of vesicles (blisters) in the mouth, on the tongue and sometimes on the additional. Similar eruptions take place on the toes, at the coronary band, and cause extreme lameness. Animals with marked foot lesions often lie down, and refuse to get up again. Affected animals frequently stand with the head down, and with streams of saliva flowing from the mouth. Marked disturbances of the digestive organs are observed.

The United States has demonstrated its ability to eradicate the disease. In general the plan is to hunt all infected and exposed animals, and cover the carcasses with lime. Infected premises are entirely disinfected and destroyed. Livestock can be taken into the premises for fear of public highways in infected areas being infested and exposed to the infection. Owners of slaughterhouses are reimbursed on the basis of value. Compensation is paid by a medical committee of officials of the Veterinary Service of the Federal Department of Agriculture. Electricity and Health.

Electric power is coming in to the community, let it be seen with smoke. For example, since the smoke began to be used in the burgh of Bury, England, not only have the townspeople been forced to use gas, but also the power stations have been forced to burn coal.

Otherwise, it would have been better if it had been put up. The smoke at the power stations causes a great deal of damage to the town. Furthermore, the power stations are not for the power stations, but for the power stations.

For the power stations, the fuel consumed in a scientific way, so as to produce the minimum amount of smoke. Probably that could not be said of the superheated furnaces.

Turkey Passing Away.

The Ottoman Empire is made up of Turkey in Europe—the strip of territory stretching across from the Black Sea to the Adriatic. Turkey in Asia, which includes Arabia, Syria and Palestine, and provinces in the Isles of Samos and Cyprus are also under the Sultan's rule.

SISTER: READ MY FREE OFFER. GREAT NORTH SEA VICTORY

German Armored Cruiser Bluecher Sunk With Loss of About 750 Lives

A despatch from London says:

The most powerful German fleet that has ventured to the open sea since the war began was crushedly defeated in the North Sea on Sunday by the British battle cruiser squadron under Vice-Admiral Sir

David Beatty.

Surprised into an action which they tried desperately to avoid, the Kaiser's battle cruisers Derfflinger, Seidzitz and Moltke, his finest armored cruiser, the Bluecher, and several light cruisers, were hampered in a running fight which lasted three hours and a half, by Admiral Beatty's battle cruisers Tiger, Lion, Princess Royal, New Zealand and Indomitable, assisted by a few light cruisers and destroyers.

Escaped in Nick of Time.

At 1 p.m. when the battle, which had covered more than 100 miles at such speed as was never before known in naval warfare, had carried the British pursuers to the very fringe of the mine fields guarding the German naval bases, the armored cruiser Bluecher, shattered by the great guns of the Lion, was at the bottom of the sea, and two of the three German battle cruisers were badly damaged. The German warships regained the protection of land forts, submarines and mines in the nick of time, as they would certainly have been destroyed had the battle ended much longer.

On the Bluecher alone more than 700 lives were lost, and the casualties on the battle cruisers that escaped were very likely large. The destruction of the Bluecher was the hardest blow which has been suffered by the German navy, for that vessel is one of the most satisfactory of her class ever launched, cost $6,750,000.

The victory, in every way the most thrilling fought by the British navy in modern times, was gained with little cost. The casualties were negligible. No British ship was lost or very seriously damaged. Admiral Beatty reports that hand, neither would he have shown us all these things, nor would at this time have told such things as these.

and called him Samson.—The Hebrew of "Samson" is Shimshon, which comes from the word "She-mesh," and means "the sun."

This name given to Samson would indicate that he was of a sunny and happy disposition. All Hebrew names as indicated in a former lesson, have appellative meanings.

Jacob means "supplanter"; Benjamin means "the son of the right hand"; Jerubbaal (Gideon); "Ba'al contends." See also 1 Sam. 25, 25
