Our Volunteers

Prof. Day places great emphasis on the selection of both sire and dam, and his counsel in this regard is much needed. Every feature pertaining to mating is thoroughly dealt with.

With the desire of placing an up-to-date handbook on swine raising within the reach of every farmer in the Province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture requested Prof. G. E. Day, of the Agricultural College, Guelph, one of Canada's leading authorities on live stock.

The author goes fully into methods of feeding, prescribes the best ration, and shows how to avoid that and other drawbacks to perfect success. His hints on pasturing and soiling crops in hog raising, especially where he compares rape with clover and alfalfa, are particularly suggestive.
