Force the Austro-Germans Out of Their Positions on the River.

A despatch from London says: The storm centre of the Galician battle front has shifted from the region of Lemberg to the line of the Dniester, south-east of the capital, and fighting of great intensity is going on along the river between Zurawna and Halicz. The German army of Gen. von Linsingen has been compelled to retreat south of the river as the result of fierce Russian attacks. This reverse is admitted by Berlin, though claims that the progress of the Austrian troops has not been interrupted, and that the forces of Gen. Boehm-Ermolli are working southward from Lemberg to join those of Gen. von Linsingen.

The Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Chronicle thus summarizes the

"The first movement of the Germans after occupying Lemberg was to attempt an advance south-eastward $1 Russian forces operating on the Dniester. This advance so far has been checked, and on the Dniester itself the Russians are displaying great energy. A large force of Germans who crossed the river near Zurawna has been jammed on to the bank and on islands. They have suffered enormous losses. Further east, near Halicz, a very mixed force of Aus-Halicz, a very mixed force of Austrians has been thrown back to the river. In these engagements the Russian light and heavy artillery gave effective support.
