Or "The Adventures of Ledgard." By the Author of "What He Cost Her."

CHAPTER VIII.

CHAPTER VII.—(Cont'd).

CHAPTER VII.—(Cont'd).

The young man raised his head, man passed him a few moments later as he stood on the steps of the hotel Once more the pink spot was burning.
Yet how hard to be dignified with the man from whom comes one's daily intent on stammering out some words bread. "You are mistaken, sir," he said. "I upon him coldly."

am quite happy and quite satisfied."
Scarlett Trent laughed scornfully.
"Then you don't look it," he ex-

"I may not, sir," the young man for almost the first time in his life continued, with a desperate courage, westwards. For years the narrow almost I am. After all happiness is leys, the thronged streets, the great spelt with different letters for all of buildings of the city had known him spelt with different letters for all of us. You have denied yourself—worked hard, carried many burdens and run great risks to become a millionaire. I too have denied myself, have worked and struggled to make a home for the girl I cared for. You have succeeded and you are happy. I can hold Edith's—Lbeg your pardon, and unusual elements which had gone my wife's hand in mine and I am happy. I have no ambition to be a millionaire. I was very ambitious to win my wife."

Scarlett Trent looked at him for a moment open-mouthed and openoved. Then he laughed outright and a chill load fell from the heart of the man who for a moment had forgotten man who for a moment had forgotten himself. The laugh was careful and the salt of his life. Steadily, sturdily, almost insciently, he had thrust his way through to the front ranks. In many respects those were singular and unusual elements which had gone to the making of his success. His had not been the victory of honied false-hoods, of suave deceit, of gentle. but legalized robbery. He- had been a hard worker, a daring speculator with nerves of iron, and courage which would have glorified a nobler cause. Nor had his been the methods of good fellowship, the sharing of "good himself."

man who for a moment had forgotten fellowship, the sharing of "good himself.. The laugh was scornful per-turns," the camaraderie of finance.

himself. The laugh was scornful perhaps, but it was not angry.

"Well, you've shut me up," he de-dealings he had treated as enemies clared. "You seem a poor sort of a rather than friends, ever watching treature to me but if you're content them covertly with close but unslackback of a chair. There was a lump in his throat' in carnest now.

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasped. "I—I'm afraid I can't thank you!"

"Don't try, unless you want me to take it back," Trent said, strolling to the side board. "Lord, how those City chaps can guzzle! Not a drop of champagne left. Two unopened bottles, though! Here, stick em in your bag and take 'em to the missis, young man. I paid for the lot, so there's no use leaving any. Now clear out as quick as you can. I'm off!"

lounger on the pavement at Pall Mall filled him with a sudden anger. The man was wearing gloves, an article of dress which Trent ignored, and smoking a cigarette, which he looked up sharply. A carriage houthed. Trent was carelessly dressing the station-yard a voice hailed him. He looked up sharply. A carriage houthed. Trent was carelessly dressing and pair of horses was waiting, and inside a young woman with a very the station of horses was waiting, and inside a young woman with a very the loathed. Trent ignored, and smoking a cigarette, which he looked up sharply. A carriage houthed. Trent ignored, and smoking a cigarette, which he looked up sharply. A carriage houthed. Trent was carelessly dressing the station-yard a voice hailed him. He looked up sharply. A carriage houthed. Trent was carelessly dressing the station of horses was waiting, and inside a young woman with a very the loathed. Trent ignored, and smoking a cigarette, which he looked up sharply. A carriage houthed him with a sudden anger. The man was carelessly dressing the station yard a voice hailed him. He looked up sharply. A carriage houthed him with a sudden anger. The man was carelessly dressing the station yard a voice hailed him. He looked up sharply. A carriage houthed him with a sudden anger. The man was carelessly dressing the station yard a voice hailed him. He looked up sharply. A carriage had and pair of horses was waiting, and him with a sudden anger. He looked up sharply. A carriage had a young woman with a very the looked up sharply. A carriage had a y

A Canadian Nurse in London

creature to me but if you're content, them coverfly with close but unslackly no business of mine. Here, buy yourself an overcoat, and drink a glass of wine. I'm off!"

He rose from his seat and threw a bank-note over the table. The clerk opened it and handed it back with a little start.

It is no business of mine. Here, buy chief the coverfly with close but unslackly content of the clerk opened and one of the coverfly with close but unslackly content of the coverfly with close but unslackly content of the coverfly celebrated as French Flag Day.

There had come a pause in his life. His back was to the City and his face was to the City and his face was set towards an unknown world. Half unconsciously he had undertaken a little start.

It is no business of mine. Here, buy celebrated as French Flag Day.

There had come a pause in his life. His back was to the City and his face was set towards an unknown world. Half unconsciously he had undertaken a little voyage of exploration.

Example a content of the coverfly celebrated as French Flag Day.

There had come a pause in his life. His back was to the City and his face was set towards an unknown world. Half unconsciously he had undertaken a little voyage of exploration.

From the Strand he crossed Trefal. A CANADIAN Red Cross Nurse selling flags in the street in England, on the day recently celebrated as French Flag Day pened it and handed it back with a little start.

"I am much obliged to you, sir," he said humbly, "but you have made a mistake." This note is for fifty pounds."

Trent glanced at it and held out his hand. Then he paused.

"Never mind," he said, with a short laugh, "I meant to give you a fiver, but it don't make much odds. Only see that you buy some new clothes."

The clerk half closed his eyes and steadied himself by grasping the has a certain difference in himself and his throat in carnest now.

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I—I'm afraid L can't thank a sticle of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "I hank article of dress which Trent larged."

"You—you mean it, sir?" he gasp-field. "You have the during expect him to conform to their type, drive round for an hour, eh?"

to learn to speak their jargon, to think

Her voice was high-pitched bargain. The delights of the world she said acidly. "I never go where I behind, it seemed to him that he had ain't wanted."

already drained. The crushing of his Trent shrugged his shoulders and Trent shrugged his shoulders and turned to the coachman. "Drive home, Gregg," he said. "I'm ures of wine, the music-halls, and the unlimited spending of money amongst people whom he despised had long since palled upon him. He had a keen, strong desire to escape once and for his surroundings. He lounged along, smoking a large cigar, keen-eyed and observant, laying up for himself a store of impressions, unconsciously irritated at every step by a sense of ostracism, of being in fanned himself thoughtfully as he walking.

The man touched his hat, the carbiage drove off and Trent, with a grim smile upon his lips, walked along the dusty road. Soon he paused before a little white gate marked private, and, unlocking it with a key which he took from his pocket, passed through any way, is told in the Manchester Guardian.

A collier, packed to the hatches with coal, gets into touch by a realest content and war vessel by it may be a little walking.

Twelve Miles an Hour.

How the British vessels of war are coaled, while sailing through heavy seas at a rate of twelve miles an hour, without hindering their activities in any way, is told in the Manchester Guardian.

A collier, packed to the hatches by a sense of ostracism, of being in some indefinable manner without kinship and wholly apart from this world in which it seemed natural now that glants of Capel Court had never weakted to be replenished. On sighting the vessel, the supply ship maneuvres unat the great houses without respect lifted his head to taste the breeze or envy at the men with a figure con-brought into contact with any of them they would regard him as a sort of wild animal, to be humored or avoided purely as a matter of self-interest. The very brightness and brilliancy of their toilettes, the rustling of their dresses, the trim elegance and daintiness which he was able to appreciate without being able to understand, only served to deepen his consciousness of the gulf which lay between him and them. They were of a world to which, even if we were permitted to enter it, he could not possibly belong. He rehouse and estate. All these things load along the sloping transport line ed something with a smile to her comwould come as a matter of course.

He opened another gate and passed minute. On reaching the deck of the panion—once before he had heard an audible titter from a little group of loiterers. He returned the glance with a lightning-like look of diabolical fierceness, and, turning round, stood upon the curbstone and called a hansom.

A sense of depression swent over

The girl had moved a step towards to raise a good many, plant a patch of them scratch for their root The girl had moved a step towards them. Sunflower seeds are great are raised indoors him as she spoke, and a gleam of sun; them. Sunflower seeds are great are raised indoors. him as she spoke, and a gleam of suntil light which had found its way into egg-producers and also make the the grove flashed for a moment on the plumage of the fowls bright and should begin his diet on billed eggs, stray little curls of her brown-gold beautiful. They are fine to feed her and across her face. Her lips through the moulting season as they was very pretty, and inclined to be applied to grow rapidly.

They are fine to feed bread and milk or some ther soft food. This notion has poliably, arisen from the knowledge that most to grow rapidly.

Variety in the food is more than apologetic. But Scarlett Trent had seen nothing save that first glance, Variety in the food is more than foods. But when we consider when the sun had touched her face half the secret of egg-production and fact that the natural food with fire. A strong man at all times, it is much cheaper to raise these different foods than it is to buy them and more than commonly self-masterferent foods than it is to buy them, this principle does not apply to backful he felt himself now as helpless as so do not forget the poultry at the
ens. ful he felt himself now as helpless as so do not forget the poultry at the ens.

so do not forget the poultry at the ens.

child. A sudden pallor had whitened his face to the lips, there were strange singings in his ears, and a made on the farm and the expense of mist before his eyes. It was shell hiving these necessary things can be found and made on the farm and the expense of quantities and as often as is conveni: chilfon, almost, and in these the

COALING WARSHIPS AT SEA. Collier and War Vessel Do It Sailing the poultry business, as in any other, seas at a rate of twelve miles an hour, without hindering their activities in chick, to thrive, must have exercise, the enemy.".

at the great houses without respect or envy, at the men with a fierce contempt, at the women with a sore feeling that if by chance he should be brought into contact with any of them the fragrance of the new-mown hay and the would regard him as a sort of the mathead of the supply vessel.

even if we were permitted to enter it, he could not possibly belong. He rehe could not possibly belong. He returned such glances as fell upon him with fierce insolence; he was indeed somewhat of a strange figure in his ill-fitting and inappropriate clothes amongst a gathering of smart people. A lady looking at him through for something at once now—a country, he could not possibly belong. He returned such glances as fell upon him a way, he thought he would be sorry are hoisted from the foot of the collier's mast to a platform at its head, below which there is a net to protect deck hands from falling pieces of coal;
below which there is a net to protect
deck hands from falling pieces of coal;
by means of wheels that run on the raised lorenettes turned and whisperhouse and estate. All these things som.

A sense of depression swept over him as he was driven through the crowded streets towards Waterloo. The half-scornful, half-earnest, prophecy, to which he had listened years ago in a squalid African hut, flashed into his mind. For the first time he began to have dim apprehensions as to his future. All his life he had been a toiler, and joy had been with him in the fierce combat which he had waged that day. He had fought his battle and he had won—where were

RUSHED FROM CEYLON

is electrically weighed, hermetically sealed and dispatched to your table fresh with all the fragrant odors of the Sunny Isle. Sample from Salada, Toronto.

Where Profit in Poultry Lies.

rye and barley sown to supply these only the inability of the third grains in the bundle for the hens to perly to expel its excrement work on. Sow some millet also to If chicks cannot be out of goors, add variety and to furnish seed for their feeding-floor should be covered the form of his doing so, he said stock beets make a very good green thrown some litter, such as the form food for the hens in the winter, so you the straw stack or leaves will need to plant plenty of them. falfa loft. Place the feed > ers in the corners and waste places chicks with hens, but even and if there are not enough corners ter case it is worth while it will pay us to give time and green food. thought to our work as the profit in lies between the cost of production

Be Sure

the Grocer Sends with the fruit you order for Tell him, too, that you want it in the Peckages originated for Sugar - 2 or 5 lb.

Sealed Cartons or 10, 20, 50 or

Then you will be sure to get the GENUINE REDPATH

100 lb. Cloth Bags.

Canada's favorite

sugar for three

CANADA SUGAR

REFINING CO.,

LIMITED,

MONTREAL.

generations—the sugar to whose preserving purity

you can safely trust good fruit.

GRANULATED SU

preserving.

Where Profit in Poultry Lies. water, grit, a variety of green food, In order to make as great profit as green or succulent food and rasein or possible we should use economy in the production as well as good judgment in the marketing of eggs and poultry, writes Mrs. A. J. Wilder.

The farmer has a great advantage here over the poultryman who has all the feed to buy and we must not for a love floor and floo here over the poultryman wno nas all small chickens are but into a possible of they will become weak. Many will be are use and make wonderfully effective trimmings on darking freds. At sowing and planting time is when ments accumulating on the down, we should make our plans for a variety of feed for the poultry through something has been fed to cause the year and especially for the win-bowel trouble. As a matter of fact they are weak from lack of exercise, deftly contrived flowers is of bronze You will want enough wheat, oats, and the appearance of dirringa is

Cabbage heads are a great treat for ter. If small quantities the fowls, so raise a few extra for given, and given often, thus Plant mammoth Russian sunflow- need more care in this way than do o grow rapidly.

Variety in the food is more than foods. But when we confider the "Criterion" he turned in and had a voices of the women of that other drink, and, biolder for the wine which would into which he had wandered himself that he would not alter a jot. There was no possibility of any missible for his eyes. It was shelf the had savallowed at a gulp, he todd, earlier in the afternoon. He turned a himself that he would not alter a jot. There was no possibility of any missible for a moment upon his to davell for a moment upon his to the winning of it, on a certain to the winning of it, on a certain to the winning of it, on a certain range with himself savalled for it. The feed a gainst a tree, a stricken and had a voices of the women of that other had gone when the had babbled even now sent sometimes the blood running colder through his veins; on the weaker men who had gone under that he might prosper. Now that it was his, he wanted the best possible walk for the man to be unnermost. In the feeding about me,"

"Exactly" he answered. "I do!"

She leaned back in the carriage with self-again, shaken and with a heart was not be unnermost. In the man to be unnermost. In the self-again, shaken and with a heart was not be unnermost. In the feeding the polity turn to chirce a large singings in his cars, and a made on the farm and the expense of buying these necessary things, can ent. If the feed is buried in the war is the fer in a creek bed and a potential and the was not be unnermost. In the feed is buried in the first man discovering the series of any interest as a creek bed and a potential and a potentia coals when the water is poured on just what grain a chicken is light fed, peared early in the season, Volt In these ways we can greatly resupplied with a variety of grain as knows how cobwebby they are less well as with casein or meat, grit and almost an absurdity to get such gar

> How the British vessels of war are and the amount received for the mar-into the army, not the law, solicitor and while sailing through heavy keted products. left of

Fashion Hints

What to Wear and How to Wear It The long, puffy handbags are

All of scalespeare's ladies appear with little money purses of satin er velvet, and, so far as we have observed, they never carry anything more than a "hanky" in them. Not so the real woman. I saw a beautiful live Just the other day carrying a Juliet of catin broade, and she tok from its luscious and sne tod depths more articles than were tre dug from the pocker of a busy small boy whose was that of c.

Many women make the mistake carrying these classrate bags when they are attired in veryday costune Such practical articles are really for tea. dances and other dress up affairs 0: looks of extremented lunging about a tromed sillen Juliet when a serge kown and a pain one we. sailor. thinking, and that is why it tle hear five trimmings on darking freels, They are made to order for each cos. tume and the same material is onployed for pipings, bows or other forms of decoration.

colored challen, the skin having the upon ties of thaffy ruffle, cut in year dykes. To give irregularity to the hey are caught up here and flounces there with huge roses of dall the satin and velvet. The color effect is warm and living, and the entire costume takes on a flowerlike fullness that is beautiful.

The corsage is a mire wish d chiffon-nothing more than a hira girdle, in fact - with narrow shoulder bands, from which flutter bits of foring chiffon caught, with more like roses. There is a narrow band at the waist of dull blue bracade, laced front and back corsict-fashion, a little vogue note that prevails just now and which is youthful and prefty and gives the little furve at the waist which is probably, much sought after years of straight front and hage waist lines. Glory be!

. Was there ever anything so pretaof the lent as the new silk sweater acket. why It shows up everywhere, in every col-ments, coats. Certainly they give neither warmth nor protection. If your skirt is plain you must what a striped jacket. If your skirt is striped, with jacket must be solid edor. That goes without saying. To many stripes spoil the tout ensemble. Also, they make your eyes go ziggy.

QUEEN MARY FROWNS.

Gay Enter ainments in War Time

Meet With Her Disapproval. Those will have anothing to do with Queen Mark jasa 4 of with philas happle and war seems marvel at the math all at end or his w. b the mill way in which she deal Tarious committees and chames with Her med la which the it connected Liter are exand gapacity for aga traordinary, and she the details of every head.

As a metter of fact bound in to got play part in as it in Que " ratio rory. It has disposited In it she easily that sires to remember in her various good work Her schenes G' Co own. If these little books could be concele in the London Mass at House they would rule The Queen cas takes t oided attitude with result to case faining in wher times, and less than her strong happered in remain tain manner. In fact, it has been openly expressed that very few life esses have gared to seed out lade tions for dances for some time-in dinners, too, have not been to numerous or popular of late L

Not Much. "There's not much perticost rate nowadays, in spite of cotes for men, was said.

"No," smiled McFes, "there's not much petticont."

Young Folks

"I thate Thursdays!" Jane, banging her skate kitchen table. "Seems to me ways Thursday!" she continued grieved voice, reaching in the draw for the paring knife. You see, dears and due! day Ann, the cook, took he a holiday leaving Jane table, but worse, oh, a the worse, to pare the potati "I don't believe I will she exclaimed suddenly will know," and taking she dumped them inc she dumped them line into a pot of boiling water Then it was that a so happened—so very stran-can hardly believe it invisqeake la husky, voide. poor head!" 'Who's the Jane, dropping the glar-crash. "To think," concolce mournfully, "that nised in rich earth had this! For this to be

It was a potato! IA is that half fallen to the tie leaning miserably agains the table, the tears pouris from his dozen eyes. serry for the poor felle forgot how surprised she you poor thing!" she' ing it up and wiping It handkerchief.

iacket."

"So you're the bumped my head," sadiy, seating himself of the dish pan and faster eyes on Jane. "Oh of to!" applogized Jane, 37 "What were jackets "she added change the subject. At to began weeping harde "I'll tunn black in the f I shall, he choked out And disgrace the fam my poor mother-what w if she knew. Builed in "Are you crying bear. take off your slips." will!" cried Jane all in running for the potato "There, I knew yes the potato radiantly. ters! do you hear what "Hurtah!" cried all that from their pot of boiling was all so very intere quite forgot that it of first polato sat on the pan while she helped their jackets—which, what every one lid to the 'llow would you feel it to a party in your had andded carnestly. He said more things, too, but I co with a black face. Before t all the potators were fir he talkative one. "Good-by!" he cried popped him in est. "See you at dingd t hurt?" she asked, im anxiously. Not potato. Great "Good-by, see you at di ed all the other potated bouncing about in the nember them, but I de la old her how terribly a p graced by appearing his jacket, or after having in his jacket was sont

"They do look as it ing fun!" murm med fully. "And I don't like to go to a purty in ter that Jane always itees out of their jacke and I hope you will should ever visit you!

LADY COLONI

Several Regiments C Now that Princess M

ly of "full age" sever: the army are anxious should be identified that there ea hould Mary's Own." . Nmoon to this distinction Mary ment without the many ber of the Royal Fre with it—the Gil Irris Roens, the 13th Hussars, Hussars, The Norfolk claims that as her, Ro was born in that county have the honor of ben! To have a royal name regiment is an amilitie the army, and particula the case in the cavalay, ith ladies as their Colonel-inare the 7th Dragoon Gu Princess Royal), the 18t (the Queen), and the line (Queen Alexandra). The were bestowed by the Ki time ago.

Never Given. "Pa," said Johnny, who sistent knewledge-secker law-giver?" "There ain" thing, Johnny," replied the tleman, who had been involved considerable litigation in But this book says that somehal was a great law-giver," persisted if Joungster. "Then it's a mistake," re-loined the father. "Law is never given. It's retailed in mighty a small quantities at mighty high figures.

