BRITISH FOOD COST RISING.

Wartime Advance Has Reached Average of 45 Per Cent.

While there is no fear of starvation in Great Britain, retail prices of food are, nevertheless increasing steadily. According to statistics just issued by the Board of Trade, it appears that the average percentage increase at the end of the year 1915 as compared with the prices of July, 1914, was 45 per cent. This increase grew steadily every month during the year 1915. The figures are based on 600 returns of predominant prices in a number of shops in every town in the United Kingdom with over 50,000 population.

The most important food articles were included in the statistics comprising British and imported beef and mutton, bacon, fish, flour, bread, tea, sugar, milk, butter, cheese, margarine, eggs and potatoes.

FRENCH REGAIN PART OF VAUX

Again in Possession of the Position They Evacuated East of the Meuse.

A despatch from Paris says: The battle for the village of Vaux, a formidable obstacle in the Crown Prince's drive against Verdun, east of the Meuse, is still raging furiously, but when Monday night settled upon the battlefield it saw the French victorious in a violent counter-attack, the first one on a large scale thus far attempted and the most successful counter movement undertaken by the defenders as regards results.

In fighting of the most savage character, which lasted all Sunday night and throughout the day, the French counter-attack gained steadily, until Monday night they had recaptured the western part of the village, and besides, thrown the Germans back to the northern edge of the Caillette wood and to the pond north of Vaux. All of these positions had been firmly held by the Crown Prince's infantry after their latest drive on this sector on Sunday, and the two previous days. Thus, a vital part of the two-mile gain made by the Germans was wrested from them by the French in their counter-attack.

BRITISH PROGRESS IN ST. ELOI REGIONS

Attack and Capture of Crater From the Germans, Also 84 Prisoners.

A despatch from London says: The British official communication issued on Monday says:

"Sunday one of our aviators shot down a German machine in the neighborhood of Lens. Another aviator attacked and drove off five hostile machines after a close combat with two of them.

"Monday morning early at St. Eloi we attacked a crater which had been held by the Germans since March 30. The crater was captured and our line was established beyond it. We took 84 prisoners, including four officers.

"The artillery on both sides has been active in this neighborhood on Monday."

EXPLOSION IN BUFFALO INJURES 25 PERSONS.

A despatch from Buffalo says: Twenty-five men were injured, several probably fatally, in an explosion at the plant of the Otis Elevator Company here on Monday. The accident was attributed to the explosion of a gas tank in the foundry. The roof of the building which was of steel and concrete construction was blown off, and the interior badly damaged. Over 100 men were at work in the plant when the explosion occurred. Twenty-two of the injured were taken to hospitals. Of the injured it was said that five were probably fatally hurt. No estimate was given as to the property loss.

MARTIN IS RE-ELECTED. BY MAJORITY OF 9,819.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mayor Frederic Martin was re-elected Mayor of Montreal for the next two years by a vote of 9,819 over Mr. Duncan McDonald, a retiring member of the Board of Control, while Ald. L. A. Lapointe, who had been for sixteen years in the City Council and was also a candidate for the Mayoralty, lost his deposit.

THE FALLING MARK.

AIR MEN RAID CANTONMENTS BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES

Squadron of 31 Allied Aeroplanes Bomb Villages—Four German Aeroplanes Brought Down at Verdun.

A despatch from Paris says: In retaliation for the bombardment of Dunkirk by a Zeppelin Sunday night, thirty-one allied aeroplanes dropped on the enemy cantonments at Keyem, Eessen, Terrest and Houthulst eighty-three shells of large calibre. Another squadron bombed the station at Conflans.

Eight bombs were dropped by the enemy on Dunkirk. The material damage was not great, but two people were killed and four wounded.

Monday numerous aerial combats were fought with success in the region of Verdun. French aviators brought down four German aeroplanes and other enemy machines took flight or were forced to land.

Germany has apologized to Switzerland for the bombing of the Swiss village of Porentruy by German airmen last week. A promise to punish the aviators who supposed they were over Belfort, has been made.

NO GAIN BY ZEPPELIN RAID

Only Very Few Killed in Paris Were Combatants.

What a relief it was to reach Paris after the strenuous time at Salonica, and how good the food in the clean and dainty restaurants tasted! What a delight it was to see clean people and clean homes again! And the calm and confidence of Paris was certainly a relief after eight days of zig-zagging at sea to dodge the submarines. I felt so at peace with all the world on my first night in Paris that I reconsidered my resolve to go to a cinema show and went to my room to write letters, says a writer in Leslie's magazine.

But what noise is that? "Dot riders" in a motorcar, shouting as they rush along the street? And then came the housekeeper to tell me to turn out the electric light. 'Oh, monsieur, didn't you hear the pompiers (firemen) shout the Zeppelins are coming."

In a few minutes the report came that the Zeppelins were overhead and then came the crash of the bombs—some large, if one may judge from the reports, and others much smaller. The people were urged to go to their homes for safety, but in common with everybody else I took to the street to see what I might.

I suspected that the attack might be aimed at the Eiffel Tower, and hurried to the Place de la Concorde to get a view of it. As the trees obstructed my view I continued to the bridge over the Seine.

From the bridge the scene was wonderful. Many searchlights were sweeping the sky for the enemy and the most powerful of all came from the Eiffel Tower. Once in a while it would pick up one of the French planes, but so far as I could see not once did the lights reveal a glimpse of the Zeppelins. We were told afterward that it was over the city only about three minutes, and that the lights mist in the air made it impossible to see it. About a dozen bombs were dropped, mostly on the poorer residential sections of the city, and while 36 persons were killed and about as many injured, there was no military advantage achieved by the raid. One bomb fell on a main avenue—I may not give its name—and crashed through the pavement into the subway below.

Many of the victims were women and children as usual, and only a few soldiers, home on leave, were killed or wounded. We have had two further attempts by the Zeppelins, but both have been frustrated by the defending aviators.

FRICTION AMONG TEUTONS.

Armies of Austrians and Germans Are Antagonistic.

After nearly four months spent as a prisoner in the hands of the Austrians, Dr. Aspland, a member of one of the "Wounded Allies" hospital units in Serbia, has reached London. He tells a story of intense friction between the Austrian and German forces which bodes ill for the future unity of the central powers, and his sympathies in the quarrel lie entirely on Austria's side.

From the time that he and the hospital to which he was attached were overtaken by the advancing Austrians at the inland watering-place of Vrnjachka Banya the doctor was impressed by the difference between the two races.

"For instance," he remarked in an interview, "at Belgrade the Austrians came forward most courteously to help the women of our party deal with their baggage. All the Germans did was to scoff at them for helping those swine. 'Swine' was the word constantly used by the German soldiers when referring to us."

On a par with these manners was the conduct of the German authorities in making all the British Red Cross workers travel in cattle trucks on the Serbian railways, while directly the frontier was crossed, on the way to Vienna, the Austrians put them in first-class carriages and treated them with the utmost consideration.

"The Germans," Dr. Aspland declared, "have the greatest contempt for the Austrians, who seem to go in absolute fear of them. There were quantity of stores at Kraglevatz, but the Austrians dared not touch them, because they had been appropriated by the Germans.

"On the road I saw some German troops commandeer—without so much as 'by your leave'—the horses of an Austrian convoy. At Vrnjachka Banya an Austrian count, who, by the bye, said that his brother had won the Liverpool Cup—observed to me 'You will never get your things back again. The Germans have got them. They have everything!'

"The mutual sentiment of the two armies," was Dr. Aspland's summing up, "is one of the strongest antagonism."

In Vienna the hospital party was treated with marked respect. Asked if the men as well as the women were to be released, the War Minister said: "Yes, of course. We will treat them handsomely."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON APRIL 9.

Lesson IX.—Æneas and Dorcas—Acts 9. 32-42. Golden Text: Titus 2: 7.

Verse 32. The story returns to typical activities of the older apostles. The saints—So to speak, the exact title of Christians as such. Holiness is not an extra, or the proper description of a select few, such as the rather ill-assorted company of men and women who have been "canonized and wear a halo. Lydda—On the way from Jerusalem to Joppa, about three quarters of the way.

Æneas—Presumably a Jew, but with a Greek name. Palsied—Luke alone uses the form of the verb found here: it was the term a doctor would use. Kept his bed—The provincial term "bedfast" used above is intended to suggest the almost vulgar word which Luke faithfully takes over from those who told him the story.

34. Make they bed—A single verb, literally, "spread for yourself." It recalls the Master's address, "Take up thy bed and walk."

35. Sharon—North of Joppa. Of course we do not gather that literally all the population "turned to the Lord"—it is a very easy hyperbole.

36. Joppa—Now called Jaffa, a town on the coast of Palestine, forty miles from Jerusalem. Dorcas—The gazelle's beautiful eyes made it a natural one to use as a girl's name.

39. Widows—It is not unlikely that these were the "enrolled" widows of I Tim. 5. 9, who spent their lives in church work. Dorcas was probably one of them. Showing—The word has a suggestion of proud and affectionate "display." Coats and garments—These general words do not represent the original. In the translation above it is assumed that here feminine attire is intended. In general the words denote the inner and outer garment respectively, one of linen and of shirt reaching to the knees, the other an unshaped wrap coiled about the body in a way more easily realized in India than in the West. Compare Matt. 5. 40, Luke 6. 29, where the point is that the "coat" is the cheaper (Matthew) inside (Luke) garment, as against the "cloak," which a robber would snatch at first and a scoundrel litigant press for. Emboldened by a smaller success.

40. Put them all forth—As Peter's Master did on the occasion remembered so well and described to his pupil John Mark (Mar 5. 40). Similarly Elijah (I Kings 17. 19) and Elisha (2 Kings 4. 33) and must be alone with God and the dead. Only Jesus can tolerate any spectators at Nain and at Bethany he had many. His assurance of the Divine "will to life" was naturally absolute as his prophets' could not be. Note that Peter makes no promises beforehand: against like Elijah and Elisha he goes into the death chamber and prays. Jesus, all three times declares the issue beforehand.

Tabitha cum (i)—His actual words differ only by a letter from those of the Master, which only Peter's disciple records (Mark 5. 41).

41. He gave her his hand—To help her faith to realize the presence of physical strength. So had Peter done to the lame man (Acts 3. 7). Presented her alive—A phrase Luke had used before (Acts 1. 3); compare also Acts 20. 12.

43. Simon a tanner—"Whose house was by the sea side" (Acts 10. 6). We should choose such a situation for a lodging because of reasons which would not appeal to Simon or to Peter his lodger. Working is an "unclean" trade, Simon lived apart; and if the sea front had none of the popularity it has with us, the odorous tan works might just as well be there, although Orientals are not in this respect particular. Luke puts in this point to show Peter's degree of emancipation from Jewish scruples, which prepares for the next chapter. Peter may have chosen Simon's house because he was a Christian and needed special encouragement.

Their Wooden Wedding.

He was idealistic and poetical. She was practical—a good matrimonial combination. He came home one evening after a hard day at the office and said:

"Maria, my dear, do you realize that to-morrow will be our wooden wedding? We ought to celebrate the occasion somehow, don't you think?"

And she said: "Hank, my darling, I know it. Been thinking about it all day and have it all arranged. I have ordered a big wagon load of kindling wood to be delivered to-morrow afternoon, and you will come home early from the office and carry it into the cellar."

If we could only recognize our duty we should be in a position to ge
