SION OF BRITAIN

PALM GROVES OF PALESTINE SEARCHED BY SALVO OF SHELLS

Water Tanks and Drilling Plant of the Germans in Egypt Destroyed by British.

A despatch from London says: A despatch from London says: A column of troops which suffered by our bombing attack on El Arish on the 18th were Germans. This probably explains their hasty retaliation by dropping bombs on Port Said civilians. Further details show that two British monitors and a sloop fired 34 heavy projectiles in the attack on El Arish, causing the enemy to scatter in all directions among the palm groves near shore; which afterwards were thoroughly searched by salvos of medium shells. The bombardment lasted two hours, and the strong fort in the town was reduced to ruins. The enemy, completely demoralized, made no reply to our fire."

FRENCH DRIVE GERMANS BACK WOUNDED BLOCK ROADS TO FRONT

Retake Part of Cumieres and Dead Man Hill Trenches.

A despatch from Paris says: In a ferocious battle in which the French took the initiative Friday evening, and which lasted far into the night, the defenders of Verdun succeeded in wresting from the Germans the eastern part of Cumieres, the tactically important village on the west bank of the Meuse. In addition to regaining this portion of the village, the French captured several trenches to the north-west of it. All subsequent German counter-attacks, violent as they were, broke down under the French defence fire.

In this attack the French took about 100 prisoners. The French also made some progress to the east of Hill 304 and repulsed a second German attack near Fort Douaumont. The capture of several trench elements south-west of Le Mort Homme netted the French about fifty prisoners.

A renewal by the Germans of their oft-repeated efforts to break through the French lines in Champagne, near Tihoue and the Noyarin farm, proved futile. While succeeding in the first onslaught in gaining a foothold in a number of small French trench elements, the Thions were completely defeated by French counter-attacks.

VERDUN LAST EFFORT
LAST HOPE OF GERMANS

A despatch from Paris says: Georges Clemenceau, in an editorial headed "Errors in Opium," argues in connection with the German's verbosity and the violent attacks on Verdun, in which he says the cost of life is out of proportion to any possible result obtainable; that life is easily given; that Verdun is the enemy's last effort. He continues: "If a triumphal entry by some impossibility could be made in the battered remnants of Verdun, the Wolf Agency would announce it as the final victory." And Charlot von Benthem-Holweg would proclaim that magnanimous humanity inclined him to

NOTE GENERAL'S SON
SENT TO PRISON

Capt. James R. White Gets Three Months' Imprisonment.

A despatch from London says: Capt. James R. White, formerly of the First Gordon Highlanders, and a son of the late Field Marshal Sir George White, the defender of Ladysmith, was sentenced on Thursday to three months' imprisonment at Abergare, Wales. He was convicted under the Defence of the Realm Act of having attempted to induce coal miners to strike in order to compel the Government to give leniency toward the leaders of the rebellion in Ireland. After leaving the army, in which he won the Distinguished Service Order for his services during the Boer War, Capt. White became a Socialist. He went to Ireland to live and took part in the riotous strike in Dublin in 1914. Later he joined the Sinn Fein Society.

LABOR ASKS VOICE IN WAR'S SETTLEMENT

A despatch from London says: The Dockers' Union has given its enthusiastic endorsement to the proposal of the American Federation of Labor that at the same time and place of the negotiations for peace, there shall be a world labor congress "so that labor shall have a voice in the terms of settlement, with the object of putting forth efforts to make war impossible in the future." The Dockers' Union will urge the proposal on all other British labor bodies.

ATTEMPT TO REACH PETROGRAD TO BE MADE BY THE GERMANS

Combined Land and Sea Attack From the Gulf of Riga and Across the Dvina.

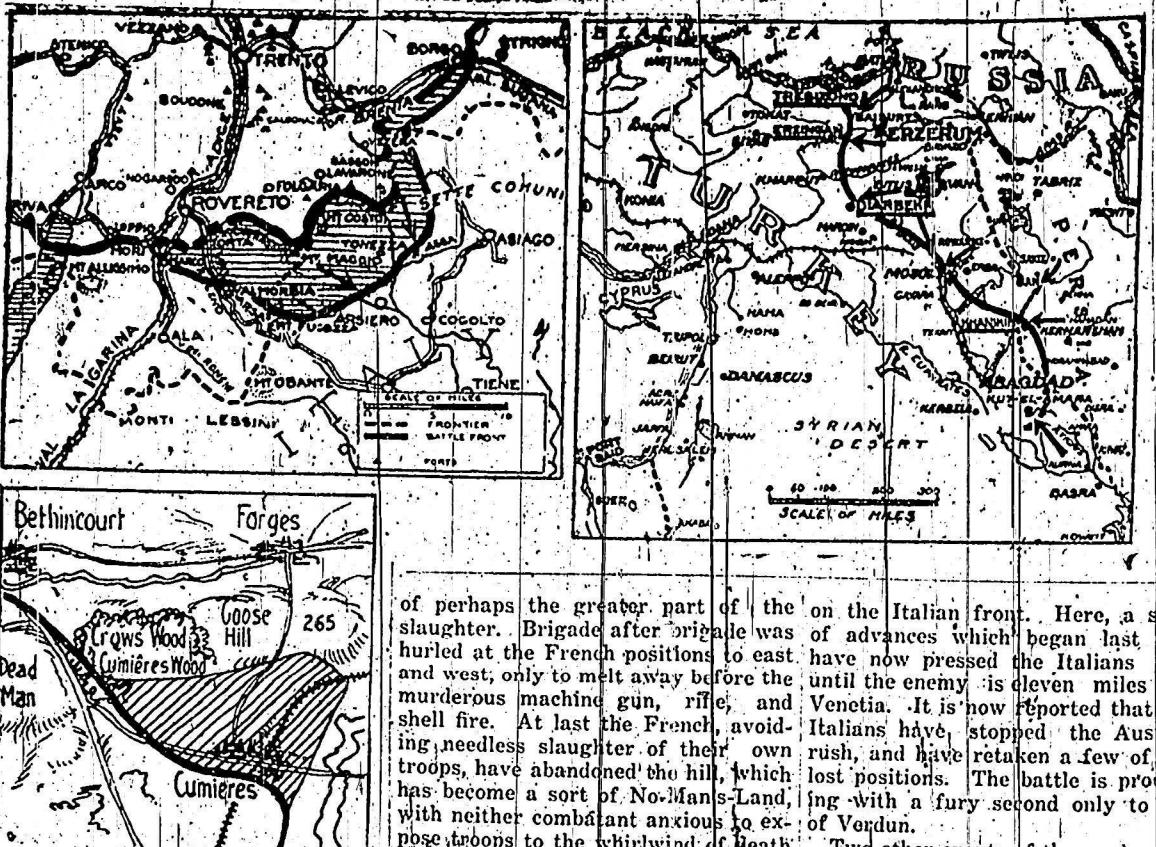

A despatch from London says: According to advice reaching Basel, the Germans are preparing for a strong naval and military offensive in the Riga region of Russia. The ports of Danzig and Koepenick are said to have been closed to commerce and ships are being used solely for transporting artillery and ammunition under the protection of a large German fleet off Libau.

The Berlin Bureau says it learns that the Germans have recently completed a new railway running from Libau through Muravievo to Mitau and that reinforcements are passing over it, as well as by sea.

ST. ELOI AND YPRES SALIENTS ARE AGAIN HEAVILY SHELLED

Recent German Attacks on the British Lines Marked by Unusual Violence.

A despatch from London says: The Germans have been more active than usual against the British lines the past few days, and their expenditure of ammunition has been lavish, according to Sir Douglas Haig's report from headquarters in the field. The positions around Loos, St. Eloi and Ypres have been shelled with particu-

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE WEEK IN THE WAR.

What may prove to be the critical period of the whole war is the struggle for Verdun which seems to have reached its climax this week in a battle which, in point of sustained fury, city and carnage, has not its equal in the history of the world. After three months of fruitless initiative, and when it seemed that the attack must die of sheer weariness, the Germans this week to press forward in a series of assaults beside which those of the early part of the struggle fade into comparative insignificance.

But while the slaughter has been proceeding at Verdun, the ascendancy of the heavy artillery of the Central Powers has been making itself known of perhaps the greater part of the slaughter. Brigades after brigades have now pressed the Italian front, and west, only to meet away outside the French positions to east, until the enemy is eleven miles into Venetia. It is now reported that the Italians have stopped the Austrian rush, and have retaken a few of the lost positions. The battle is proceeding with neither combatant anxious to expose troops to the whirlwind of death which sweeps its summit!

Two other events of the week are of outstanding importance.

Voluntary service in England is now a thing of the past. From now until the end of the war Great Britain will call upon her citizens as they are needed for service.

Sinister, indeed, for Turkey is the junction which was reported this week between a force of Russian cavalry and the British troops on the Tigris. Whence came the Russians, and by what route is not known, but they are there and without doubt more to come. Contemporaneously with this came the report that the Turks had abandoned some of their advanced positions, and had lost a portion of one of the rear positions in a British assault.

On the Italian front, Here, a series of advances which began last week, has now pressed the Italian belligerents into the interior of Venetia. It is now reported that the Italians have stopped the Austrian rush, and have retaken a few of the lost positions. The battle is proceeding with neither combatant anxious to expose troops to the whirlwind of death which sweeps its summit!

Meanwhile the French, taking matters into their own hands, made an unexpected advance against Fort Douaumont across the Meuse. They succeeded in taking and practically the whole position, and permitting the Germans to retake it at horrible cost of men and ammunition. Omahas also has fallen to the Germans, but as the French have withdrawn from the more dangerous positions at Delai Man's Hill, it is doubtful if this commanding position is worth the expense it cost them.

But while the slaughter has been proceeding at Verdun, the ascendancy of the heavy artillery of the Central Powers has been making itself known

A despatch from France says: Confirmation of reports that the German casualty lists are so far in arrears that their total as issued from time to time is in no way representative, is declared now to have been supplied. It is now known that the names of Germans taken prisoner and left dead in the trenches at the battles of Loos in September last have only just been published as among the German missing.

A despatch from Paris says: President Poincaré on Thursday inaugurated an exposition in the Tuilleries Gardens at which methods of reconstructing the devastated villages of France are being demonstrated. Types of deconstructed houses, with modern sanitary equipment, and plans for laying out cities and towns are on exhibition.
