Calgary, Alta. Oct. 7, 1916.

C. W. Rutledge, Markdale, Ont.

Dear Sir,—

Enclosed please find the sum of five dollars to apply on my subscription to your paper. It has been a welcome visitor to me for the past 30 years. Crops have been excellent in Southern Alberta, not so good in the north.

Threshing is in full swing, yields are good. The potato crops are splendid, in fact all vegetables are good. We had a slight fall of snow about a week ago, which delayed threshing, as it is done principally out of the stooks. Labour is very scarce, the usual wage is $3.50 to $4 per day for stooking and threshing.

Have two sons in the 137th Batt., over in England. They are located at Milford, Witley Camp, Surrey, England. We hear from them quite often. Yours truly,

W. H. Manarey.

Items under this heading inserted for one cent a word each week.

Camp Champions.

(Amherst Daily News)

Again Amherst extends the strong staunch hand of genuine welcome to a newly arrived battalion on Sunday afternoon, the 147th Battalion (Canadian Greys) arrive in Amherst. All at that time were strangers, but such a condition of affairs exists no longer.

Amherst literally clasped the Ontario lads with open arms, Sunday evening and on Monday, the news was glad to note that the khaki coated warriors, were on the best of terms with the citizens of this town; masculine and feminine.

On various occasions during the past summer, the first town in Province of Nova Scotia, has welcomed Ontario Battalions. First came the 123rd Royal Grenadiers; next the 12th Brigade, C.F.A. from Pettawawa, comprising the 47th, 48th, 49th, and 54th Batteries along with the Brigade Ammunition column. Last but not least comes the 147th. As we have stated they have already attained a high degree of popularity.

Under the command of Lieut.-Col. McFarland, the battalion was recruited in Grey County, Ontario and consists of one immense happy family prepared to engrave deep upon the battle fields of Europe, the warring name of Canada. Well have they been trained to do so.

At Camp Borden, the Greys won the bayonet fighting championship a great honor, considering the fact that other regiments innumerable, were striving for the same position of merit. Out pointing and out fighting in a sportsmanlike style, the Canadian Greys came out on top.

Conversing with a number of the N.C.O.'s last evening, the first question that the soldiers asked the newsman concerned sport. "Football or Lacrosse, we can raise a team that will defeat practically any other aggregations in the Dominion. "Our readers who have followed the activities of Upper Canadian battalions in the Toronto papers, will pronounce this to be the solemn truth.

The battalion bands are excellent, the bugle band cannot be eclipsed. This was the verdict rendered by prominent local musicians.

The result of a lengthy period of training, is plainly shown by the veteran like swing and air of the marching soldiers. One and all are ready for active service. Furthermore they are eager to cross the water, and engage in conflict with the barbarous Boche.

Another thing impressed us. It was the display of good feeling between officers and men. Familiarity with the 147th does not breed contempt. Discipline is maintained, but not of the iron handed kind. Rather it resembles that of a large office. Every man working as one, with the definite aim of success constantly in view.

In closing, the town of Amherst, the News and its readers, extend to the Canadian Greys a sincere and hearty welcome to the town.

Hydro Power for the Farmer

A successful demonstration of the use of Hydro Electric Power on the farm was given at Mr. Thos. L. Mercer's on Wednesday morning of last week. Many visitors to the fair were present and several came from a distance for this particular attraction. Mr. Mercer has the distinction of being the first farmer in Grey County, to put in electrical equipment and his is the first farm power load on the Eugenia system. He does not believe that he has reached the limit of the possibilities of the economical uses of power and expects to add several units to his equipment at a later date. However, if he goes no farther, he has an outfit that means much to him in convenience and economy. He has wired for lighting the following buildings: his own house, his mother's residence, two large barns, pump house, blacksmith shop, two drive sheds and one hog pen. His washing of clothes is done with a ½ H.P. motor, which motor will also run a churn and cream separator. An electric iron is a blessing for the Mercer womenfolk in hot weather and a very handy convenience at any time of year. In the pump house a small motor does the work that a 2½ H.P. gasoline engine formerly did considerable fussing about. The ½ H.P. electric motor now in use forces water to tanks in the house and two barns, one of them almost a hundred yards away. This motor does the work of pumping with ease, but will probably be exchanged for a 2 H.P. motor which could be belted to a shaft in the adjacent blacksmith shop and used for running a grindstone and other small power purposes. The king pin of the whole Mercer equipment is the 10 H.P. motor. This motor is intended to do the heavy power work on the farm. It has been mounted with an auto starter on skids somewhat like a stone boat and is hauled by a horse from place to place as the work may require. Three motor stations have been installed on the premises and a fourth will be added at the barn on the east side of the road.

Three minutes to haul the motor, two minutes to make the line connections, one second to throw the switch and Mr. Mercer is ready to cut corn, buzz wood or grind grain. One load of corn was held back for the demonstration and this little 10 H.P. motor, working under adverse conditions, with an unsuitable belt and connected to a pulley three or four inches too large to give the ideal speed to the blower, this "queer little animal," as one man called it, easily disposed of the corn as fast as it was fed into the machine. One feature of this kind of power is that the speed of the motor is constant, whether running light or under a heavy load. Another is that a standard electric motor will do considerably more work than its rated capacity, would indicate. This year the 10 H.P. electric motor cut Mr. Mercer's corn and "never turned a hair." Last year a 16 H.P. steam engine doing the same work, ran away with itself when the hopper was empty, and grunted and puffed and wheezed itself, almost to a standstill, when an extra heavy sheaf was fed into the box.

This year a cost of corn cutting $2.36. Last year the same amount of work cost $8. Lack of time prevented a demonstration of wood cutting by electric power, but it will be readily understood that any engine or motor which can handle corn cutting and grain grinding, has ample power to tackle the woodpile. It should be as readily understood that electric power for buzzing wood as well as the other jobs means the doing away with the extra man required to look after a steam engine or to minister to the many temper testing notions of a gasoline motor.

The motor station for grain grinding on the Mercer farm is located in one of the large drive sheds. Several bags of oats were ground at the demonstration. Mr. Mercer tells us that he chopped over one hundred and fifty bushels on Saturday in less than two hours and a half. This grain was probably not weighed but if the amount were one hundred and fifty bushels and it had taken three hours the cost to Mr. Mercer for current would have been at the rate of ¾ of a cent per bushel. Although it is only four years since the Ontario Hydro Commission first demonstrated the uses of electric power as a farm economy, it has already seen a large fruitage in farm installations particularly in the southern part of the Province, where the Niagara power lines are reaching along the concessions in many townships. For the farms of average size, where there are a number of power consumers in a group, the idea has been to wire the different premises and install the ordinary small power equipment and for the members of the group to form a syndicate for the purchase and operation of heavy power outfits consisting of transformers, motor-fed cutting boxes, sawing machines and grain grinders. Something of that nature may develop in this district where power is to be had as cheap and convenient as in any other part of the Province. The average farmer can figure his cost for power and service for lighting his house and outbuildings and for the operation of small motors at around sixty dollars a year with three consumers per mile. The greater the number the smaller the cost. The Markdale Hydro Commission is prepared to assist prospective consumers in making estimates and installations. A motor trip had been arranged by Mr. Duff, the County Agricultural representative and Dr. Campbell manager of the Markdale Hydro system to enable some of the progressive farmers of this district

MARKDALE FALL FAIR

Weather Favorable. -- Good All-round Exhibit. -- Attractive Horse Speeding.--Large and Orderly Crowd.--Bumper House at Concert.--Gratifying Receipts.

President W. R. Burnett and Secretary J. S. Shepherdson with their energetic staff of officials and workers have every reason to be gratified with the result of their arduous and well-directed efforts in behalf of Markdale Agricultural Fair. The exhibit, with but few exceptions, was up to or above the high average. The Armouries [illegible] proven a most excellent agricultural Hall, being convenient, spacious and well lighted. The various classes were systematically arranged.

The Stanley piano exhibit at the entrance, by Mr. Kentner, was a pleasing attraction, and, with the Columbia Grafonola, and Mr. Stephenson's Edison Phonograph at the opposite end of the hall, furnished music and filled a felt want.

Visitors to the fair enter the hall from the sidewalk and in inspecting the inside exhibit pass out at the rear of the building to the agricultural grounds "Queen Edward Park."

Owen Sound Citizens Band arrived by morning train and furnished excellent music throughout the days.

At one o'clock a juvenile parade led by the band and carrying scores of little flags marched from the public school to the park, in itself was an inspiring sight.

The exhibit of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry was [illegible]. The Driving Club pulled off [illegible] attractive and clean program, which resulted as follows:

The success of the day was even at night as a host succeeded, Senator Sproule with Duncan R. Cowan, Tom Williams, Jean Simpson and Miss Fancy as entertainers and Miss K. Brown pianist. The large hall was packed with a lively and appreciative audience.

Gate receipts 1915 $518; 1916 $521. Concert Receipts 1915 $83; 1916 $235.25; gain $152.25. Total receipts 1915 $601; 1916 $756.35; gain $27.35.
