of Siberians a land of opportunities, covered usually with forest and fit for human habitation. To such it will come as a result of one section alone, the Urals and the Yenisei River, is reliable, supporting a population of 200 million, out of the 110 million, the entire population of Siberia. This startling information regarding the future possibility of Western Siberia is given by the Department of Trade and Commerce of Canada, which is endeavoring to interest British merchants in the market for agricultural implements and other articles which should go to Siberia as soon as the winter over.

Rich in Minerals.

Agriculture is not the only source of wealth in Western Siberia. The soil is extremely rich in mineral deposits, especially gold, silver, copper, and coal. If, after the war, a good deal of good transportation facilities are remedied, the mining industry will have been eliminated. It is expected that the Russian Government will take steps as soon as possible to provide Western Siberia with a system of communication with outside markets.

The war ambitious railway system has been worked out for the most part, while hostilities are at a standstill and the normal course completely upset, some important roads were brought to complete among them the Kuhundzhi Railway, 200 miles long; the Altai Railway, 200 miles long; the first section of Kolyma Railway, 200 miles long; and the Minusinsk Railway, 276 miles long. But these roads, useful though they may be, are but an important part of the gigantic project contemplated.

Grain and Coal Storage.

In addition to railways it is planned to build enormous grain elevators in Western Siberia. Cold storage will be organized on a big scale; it is estimated already 1300 refrigerating units have been put into service for the transportation of Siberian butter and ice-house reservoirs have been established all along the railroads. It plans at present in construction are carried out. Western Siberia will have a cold storage grain storage system without a rival in the world.

Concluding its report on this new field of immense possibilities, the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce says:

These developments suggest several possibilities that it would be wise to ignore. The trade of the country is more or less under the control of European Russia and is carried chiefly by the great merchant houses at Moscow, but that fact does not prevent firms interested in making a research study of the Commercial Possibilities.

For, indeed, we encourage the development of agriculture, not only will it be a great boon to agriculture and domestic requirements, but the ultimate timber resources and the largely boundless forests will also at a time receive attention they deserve, with the fact that the general needs of all the communities must steadily increase, and the expense with rapidity. It is significant that the great majority of the people are relatively poor, and that those of the Russian aristocracy that have remained are now showy, but not well off, and are strongly attached to their old ways of life. They have had to be content with West Siberia, as far as possible, and are practically
