The TRIFLERS

Frederick Olin Bartlett

Monte again began to pace his room. She must go to Davos with him next winter. He must take her around the whole schedule with him. She must go to Brighton and golf with him, and from there to his camp. She must love it there. He could picture her in the woods, on the lake, and before the camp-fire, beneath the stars.
From there they would go on to Cambridge for the football season. She would like that. As a girl she had been cheated of all the big games, and he would make up for it. So they would go to New York for the footballs. He had had rather a stupor time of it last year. He had gone down to Chicago for Christmas, but had been oppressed by an uncomfortable feeling that he did not belong there. Mrs. Chic had been busy with so many presents for others that he had felt like a stranger. He had made his usual gifts to relatives, but only as a matter of habit. With Mrs. Chic he would be glad to go shopping as Chic and Mrs. Chic did. He might even go on to Philadelphia with her and look up some of the relatives he had lately been avoiding.
Where in thunder had this thought taken him again? He put his head in his hands. He had carried her around his whole schedule with him just as if this were some honest-to-God marriage. He had done this while she lay in the next room peacefully sleeping in perfect trust.
She must never know this danger, nor be further subjected to it. There was only one safe way to take the early train for Calais, without even seeing her again.
Monte sat down at the writing-desk and seized a pen.
Dear Marjorie (he began): Something has come up so suddenly that makes it necessary for me to take an early train for England. I can't tell how long I shall be gone, but that of course is not important. I hope I will get on to Etobicoke, as we had planned, and I shall be home in time. Somehow, I feel that you belong out under the blue sky and not in town.
He paused a moment and read over that last sentence. Then he scratched it out. Then he tore up the whole letter.
What he had to say should be not written. He must meet her in the morning and tell her like a man.

CHAPTER XI
A Cancelled Reservation
"Though it was late when he retired, Monte found himself wide awake at half past seven. (Sprung from bed, he took his cold bath, shaved, and after dressing proceeded to pack his bags.) The process was simple; he called the hotel waiter, gave the order to have them ready as soon as possible, and telephoned upstairs to Marie, and learned that Madame would meet him in the breakfast-room at nine. This left him a half-hour in which to pay his bill at the hotel, order a reservation on the express to Calais, and buy a large bunch of fresh violets, which he had placed on the breakfast table—a little table in a subsidiary corner.
"Good-morning, Monte."
He turned quickly—so quickly that she started in surprise.
"Is anything the matter?" she asked.
She was in blue this morning, and wore at an angle a broad-brimmed hat trimmed with black and white. He thought her eyes looked a trifle tired. He would have said she had not slept well.
"I didn't know you were down," he faltered.
"The interval of six hours upon which he had been depending vanished instantly. To-day was but the continuation of yesterday. As he moved toward the breakfast-room at her side, the outside world disappeared as by magic, leaving only her world—the world immediately about late. By the time they finished their breakfast, it would be too late. He met her eyes. They were steady as planets. They were honest and clear and clean and confident. They trusted him and he knew it. He took a deep breath and leaned forward. Impulsively she leaned across the table and placed her hand upon his.

"Dear old Monte," she breathed.
It was too late—now! He saw her in a sort of mist of dancing golden notes. He felt the steady throbbing of her pulse.
She withdrew her hand as quickly as she had given it. It was as if she did not dare allow it to remain there. It was that which made him smile with a certain confidence of his own.
"What would better do," he said, "is to get out of Paris. I'm afraid the pace here is too hot for us."
"I have it!" he continued. "We'll go to Etobicoke by motor. It's a beautiful drive down there. I made the trip alone three years ago in a car I owned. We'll take our time, putting up at the little villages along the way. We'll let the motor do the work. We'll get away from people. It's people who make you worry. I have a notion it will be good for us both. This Hamilton episode has left us a bit morbid. What we need is something to bring us back to normal."
"We'll love it," she fell in eagerly. "We'll just play easy."
"Right. Now, what you want to do is to throw into a dress-suitcase a few things, and we'll ship the trunks by rail to Nire. All you need is a cashish or soaked salt codfish, 8 potatoes, 1 pint boiling water, 1 slice onion, 1-inch square fat salt pork, 1 tablespoonful salt, 1 quart milk, dash of pepper, 8 crackers. Try out the fat or use drippings in its place, add the onion and brown. Turn the fat into the saucepan, add potatoes, boiling water and cook ten minutes. Add the fish and simmer ten minutes, then add the milk, seasoning and heat to the boiling point. Serve with the crackers moistened in cold milk on the top of the chowder."
"Fish Chowder—2 cupfuls flaked codfish or soaked salt codfish, 8 potatoes, 1 pint boiling water, 1 slice onion, 1-inch square fat salt pork, 1 tablespoonful salt, 1 quart milk, dash of pepper, 8 crackers. Try out the fat or use drippings in its place, add the onion and brown. Turn the fat into the saucepan, add potatoes, boiling water and cook ten minutes. Add the fish and simmer ten minutes, then add the milk, seasoning and heat to the boiling point. Serve with the crackers moistened in cold milk on the top of the chowder."
"Vegetable Soup (without Meat)—1 small onion, 1-3 cupful turnips, 1-3 cupful carrots, 1/2 cupful celery salt, 1 quart water, 4 tablespoonfuls shippings, 1-2 cupful potato, 1/2 table-spoonful minced parsley, dash pepper. Wash, scrape or pare and cut the vegetables into slices and prepare them before measuring. Mix the vegetables together omitting the potatoes. Melt the drippings in a stew pan, add the vegetables and cook about ten minutes stirring constantly, so that all brown evenly. Add the potatoes and cook five minutes more, then add the water and simmer slowly two hours, covered. Season with salt and pepper, add the minced parsley and serve very hot. The vegetables may be mashed finer with a fork or chopped very fine.
"Cherries should be hatched early this year so that they will mature on the green stuffs of the summer season. Store feed is found to be high this year.

To be added to the soup just before serving.
To make the white sauce use two tablespoonfuls of fat, one tablespoonful of flour to each cup of milk and season to taste. Mix the flour with an equal quantity of cold water, or milk and stir until smooth, then add enough more milk to make it pour easily. Heat the rest of the milk in a double boiler (never boil the milk) and when hot all through add the flour mixture gradually and stir constantly as the mixture thickens. Add the butter and seasoning and let cook ten or fifteen minutes.
Cream of Pea Soup—1 can corn peas, 1 pint cold water, 1 teaspoonful sugar, 1 quart thin white sauce. Method same as stated above.
Cream of Corn Soup—1 pint can of corn, 1 pint cold water, 1 small slice onion, 1 quart thin white sauce. Method same as stated above.
Cream of celery, turnip, potato, bean soups all made same as above.
Corn Chowder—1 can corn, 2-lb. cube fat salt pork, 1 slice onion, 1 potato, 1 quart milk, 8 crackers, salt, dash pepper. Fry out the fat or use drippings in place of the salt pork fat. Add the onion to the melted fat and cook until brown. Strain the fat into a large saucepan, add the potatoes cut into half-inch cubes and the boiling water. Cook until the potatoes are soft, then add the milk and corn. Heat to the boiling point, season, moisten the crackers with cold milk and serve them on the top of the chowder.
"No, Monte," she answered, with a decided shake of her head.
"But, hang it all, people don't go gossiping with French maids!"
"Why not?" she demanded.

ABOUT THE HOUSEHOLD

Soups minus Meats.
Soups made with milk furnish a wholesome-nutrient food rich in food value since they contain all the nutritive value of the milk in addition to the vegetables and other ingredients used. The food is in easily digested form and when served with bread and butter furnishes all the necessary food elements for a balanced meal.
There is a better way to utilize the left overs of the dinner, the tough parts of vegetables, the water in which vegetables are cooked, and they provide a food of such high values at so low a cost.
Soups made from split peas, green peas, beans, lentils or fish are richer than those made from celery, carrots, turnips, potatoes or asparagus and chowder makes a good substantial meal. Either canned or salt fish may be used in fish chowder when fresh fish is not available.
The housewife whose shelves are supplied with cold-pack vegetables has first-class material for nourishing, delicious and inexpensive soups.
The proportions for cream soups or soups made without meat are: About one-half as much vegetable pulp as milk or white sauce with the addition of seasoning. If the vegetables used contain a large amount of starch, milk may be used without thickening and where there is water in which the vegetables were cooked, an equal amount of vegetable water and pulp is used with the same amount of white sauce.
The general directions for making cream soups are:
Cook the vegetables in water until they are soft, then press through a coarse strainer and add the water in which they are cooked to the pulp that comes through the strainer.
Make the white sauce just before serving time and combine the vegetable pulp with the white sauce after the sauce has cooked up. Do not let the soup stand long before serving as it is likely to thicken too much. Serve very hot with crackers or bread cut in half-inch cubes and toasted a delicate brown. To make a richer soup an egg, slightly beaten, or a few teaspoonfuls of whipped cream may

In the great army camp in Mississippi, the officer in charge of the school for cooks and bakers inaugurated the "Cut It Thin" campaign. He had the bread knives sharpened, had the bread sliced carefully and cut down the bread consumption in that camp for two weeks, during which careful check was kept, by 61,269 pounds making an average daily saving of 4,085 pounds of bread. It not only saved the Government $3,500 in those two weeks but it meant a saving of 240 pounds of flour for the Allies. Needless to say, the bread knives have been kept in the best of condition ever since down there.
The latest cable received by the Canada Food Board from the British Ministry of Food relative to the situation overseas states that compulsory rationing of meat, butter and fats came into force on February 25 throughout London and the home counties. It adds: "Fourteen million people are now restricted to about 1 1/2 lbs. of meat, 4 oz. of butter or margarine and 1/2 lb. of sugar per week. By March 25 compulsory rationing of these food stuffs will be universal in the United Kingdom. The congestion on the railways in the United States continues to aggravate the already serious situation. Every carload of wheat or flour and bacon or frozen meat that Canada can get to the sea-board is badly wanted.

"The Italian Government Commission states that the food situation there is unchanged but all the Allies' countries are naturally affected by the decreased imports reaching them from American ports."
Several years ago a teacher in a country school went to the city for dental service, and returned wearing a gold crown on one of her molars. On Monday morning a little maid spied the new tooth. Her eyes grew dark and large with excitement and pleasure; for a moment she was too delighted to speak.

ALLIES' RACE WITH U-BOATS
100,000 TONS A MONTH BEHIND IN THE STRUGGLE
Sir Eric Geddes Announces Additional Ship Production Necessary to Meet Rate of Losses.
One of the most important statements made to the country this year was the speech delivered in the British House of Commons last night by Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty. He reported on the demand which has become steadily more exact figures of the situation, saying the tonnage of the fleet in twelve months was 2,500,000 tons, and also announced the production of Great Britain's ship-building.
In announcing the production of the Pirrie yards, he said that more than half the tonnage of standardized ships was produced in the long, it would be a great relief to the one thousand ships produced from these yards.
He urged all the shipbuilders to themselves into the production of 100,000 tons of ships each month, which was necessary to meet the present rate of losses.
Lord Pirrie will be on the board of the Admiralty, and will have direct access to the cabinet. His views, as indicated, will be of the greatest importance.
Facts plainly stated, Sir Eric's speech was the debate on the subject, with no oratorical flourish, and his attention was paid to the most important part of the Government.
The world's tonnage of enemy's ships, which had fallen 250,000 tons in the war, is now 420,000 tons. The total tonnage of the world is 42,000,000 tons. The United States has produced 1,000,000 tons of ships in the last year, and the British have produced 1,000,000 tons. The German ships are being built at a rate of 1,000,000 tons a year, and the Japanese are building 1,000,000 tons a year. The British have a tonnage of 1,000,000 tons, and the United States has a tonnage of 1,000,000 tons. The German ships are being built at a rate of 1,000,000 tons a year, and the Japanese are building 1,000,000 tons a year. The British have a tonnage of 1,000,000 tons, and the United States has a tonnage of 1,000,000 tons.
