PRACTICAL FARMING

When the Cows Are Under Cover. The dairy cow has a nervous temperament which is easily disturbed by unusual noises in the barn, such as barking dogs or unnecessary shouting among the men.

The pure-bred bull in a community is a fine asset and farmers owning such animals should feel free to ask their neighbors to give him the use of the animal that is in proper proportion to its value as a breeder.

When the cows are under cover, they do not like ice water. The tank heater can be regulated just right for them on a cold winter day and it has a beneficial influence on the amount of milk produced.

When the winds are cold and the snow is blowing, the dairy cows should not be left out in the field. They like fresh air and they will enjoy a protected barnyard even in cold weather.
