ESCAPING FROM A PRISON CAMP

THE FAMOUS TUNNEL AT HOLZMINDEN.

Wonderful Feat of British Prisoners in Escaping From Enemy Camp.

Wherever prisoners of war are considered there are almost sure to be desperate attempts to escape—some of which are successful. Lieut. E. H.
Goldsack, a British officer, who was several times captured and was always ready to plan and execute some daring scheme of escape, writes in the "Wide World Magazine" of a venture that was undertaken so far as he was concerned as twenty-nine of his comrades got away. This was the famous tunnel at Holzminden prison camp.

The tunnel was dug by a picked party of men with every kind of instrument: it started from a secret part of the barracks and ran out some three hundred feet beyond the stockade into an open field. When the hole was finished, says Lieut. Garrard, the working party went in first, about eleven o'clock, and then the other men, according to an arranged plan.

"As we kept only five minutes' warning we did not know who was in front or behind. I was summoned about the morning. 'Be in the tunnel in five minutes, or you miss your turn.'"

It was pitch dark when I got inside the tunnel room, where the mouth of the tunnel was situated, and there was a mournful noise, something like the sound water makes just as it runs out of a big tank and down a pipe. It was caused by the people still in the tunnel, who were calling out to each other as they wended along.

The first part of the tunnel was very steep, and when I started to push my haversack in front of me, it suddenly disappeared and rolled down to the bottom. Going "downhill" was easy enough, but when I got to the bottom of the ditch I found progress very hard work.

A Terrible Adventure.

The tunnel was so small, that I had to lie flat on my stomach, with my head above my head. There was not room enough to pull one arm back or to raise my head far without hitting the roof. There was no such thing as regularly in the schoolhouse Friday night for "literary" durseveral years, but they seemed to be getting to a rut. The younger folks especially were not very excited at the meetings.

The enthusiasm with which the older people sang on their way to the meetings finally suggested an idea. Of course, they had had some singing at the "literary," but it wasn't of the joyful, stirring kind that was needed. At the next meeting they succeeded in getting the idea accepted that they should get hold of the new popular songs and also work up some of the old favorites, and that there should be a song after each number on the program, and all join in, singers and non-singers.

They knew very well that no one would actually feel like joining in when the time came, so they got all to agree that every one should pay a cent for every song, not participated in. To enforce the rule, insistors were appointed who, themselves singing heartily all the time, watched for people not joining in. It was necessary to choose exactly the right people for this. At first many people moved their lips and merely pretended to sing, but that led them on to singing heartily.

By the fourth week of the new style the thing was an undoubted success. The spirit of the place was entirely changed. The old awkwardness that every one had shared before gave way to a sort of thrill of interest in everything. Perhaps the people were all wondering what the next song would be. Whatever the reason, they took a keen interest in everything.

They had now dropped the "fines" system, and use another method. Some one—generally the school-teacher or the minister, but sometimes a real singing teacher—sits on the platform during all the singing, and after each song marks up on the blackboard a stroke for whichever side of the room sang the best. The rivalry runs very high each week, and the rooms as always divided sharply into two sections. Moreover, the rivalry is of a particularly merry and good-natured sort. A singing "literary" after this fashion is a sure-fire success.
