THE LOCAL PAPER.

Town Weekly Performs Real Service to the Community that is Worth of Citizens' Best Support.

By George M. Murray (Editor of Farm and Home) It is the day of the weekly paper. All the world is getting down to business. Waste is being eliminated, wages are going up, costs are going up. Shortage of newsprint is going to work a great change in the newspaper business.

Years ago, newspapers slammed each other over politics. Rival editors attacked each other. Nowadays most papers view politicians with suspicion. Everything around a newspaper is on a cost basis.

If a politician wants space in a paper to-day, he pays for it just as a grocer might. Our great dailies are no longer champions of parties or organs of individuals. They are rather great impersonal institutions for circulating what is known as news. News of general interest goes in certain columns; the best and most interesting news goes in the advertising columns.

Never in a hundred years has the weekly paper occupied the place it has today in the hearts of the people. It has a fortune to launch and finance one of the big dailies; but the weekly paper is an institution which can be financed upon comparatively small capital. It is not the money in a weekly paper which makes it important in a community; it is the brains behind the thing, the heart, the personality.

It is not the circulation of the weekly paper, which makes it a great force in the community. It is the policy of the paper, the character of the men associated with it.

While the great dailies publish long accounts of the doings of the chancellors of Europe, the modern, well-edited weekly confines its attention to valuable work nearer at hand.

Its field is near to the earth. It does not deal in international politics but does the job which is a hand.

The day of the bitter fight as between Grit and Tory has gone forever. Whether this or that party should be in power does not disturb the editor of 1920. But there are vital problems dealt with in the rural press, the weekly press, which the great journals rarely discuss. And here are some of them:

Development of Agricultural science. Improvement of markets. Building of better roads. Improvement of educational facilities for the country districts.

To-day space which was once devoted to articles attacking political opponents has been reclaimed for such good work as the advocacy of breeding of pure-bred stock. Where the weekly press once delved in the political field, intelligent and serious minded newspapermen are to-day devoting their literary talents to such subjects as the more intensive cultivation of the field in which food for man and beast is the harvest.

They keep down near to the hearts of the people, do the weekly papers, and near to the earth. Their editors speak in a language all of us can understand.

If there are among editors to-day leaders of public opinion, you will find a higher percentage of them among the men of the weekly press. Free from the entangling influences of the great cities, aloof from sordid commercialism, their expressions are more likely to be those of free and unbiased thinkers and observers who are each day in personal touch with the men and women of the community.

Citizens can perform no better community service than that of supporting the local press.

And that support must not be limited to the spending of money upon advertising space or subscriptions, but must be to an extent personal and from the heart.

From Cherry-Blossom Land

The Japanese Give Good Example.

It is a proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depend on a woman's health. What is it that makes our Canadian women often pale, yellow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old-looking when they are only forty-five when they should be in their prime? Women, suffering from glandular troubles and spine-aches and headaches, followed by irregularities and a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

ONTARIO WOMEN TESTIFY

Chatham, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's medicine has been used in my family at home especially by my father and brother ever since I can remember. They always proved very satisfactory. Through overwork I at one time became all run-down in health, was on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. I went on all day for about two years, during which time I suffered terribly. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it soon built me up in good health and cured me of the nervous condition. I consider it an excellent medicine for the ailments of women."—MRS. CEAS.
