Fruits and Vegetables.

Most of the care of the growing crop will have been over before this article appears, but sometimes attention towards the end of the season will save a crop or increase the yield.
If the season is favorable for the development of the apple scab in the latter part of the summer, an extra spray will make a marked difference in the quality of the fruit. The spraying of currants with Bordeaux mixture to prevent diseases of the leaves which appear in late summer should be done before the foliage is injured.
The early dropping of leaves for currents account of disease lessens the yield for the following year.

Celery should be kept well sprayed with Bordeaux mixture until it is dry, to ensure it against disease, and the tops of potatoes also must be protected with it to the end of the growing season.

Home-grown seed is usually very satisfactory. As far as possible the best that the best crop for you to grow for hay will be millet. Of course peas and oats make exceedingly good hay, but the middle of July will be altogether too late to sow this mixture for hay this year. Millet hay will have to be fed carefully to horses, since if it is fed exclusively for a long period it will develop lameness and general muscular trouble. It should be fed with a mixture of other material, especially a judicious amount of concentrates, such as oats. In sowing millet thirty pounds to the acre is sufficient if the seed is of good quality.

W. G. B.: What is the best way to kill ground ivy which is spreading over my lawn all the time?

Answer: To kill ground ivy, if the weed is concentrated in certain parts of your lawn, apply salt heavily over the surface of these areas. This will

Farm Crop Queries

CONDUCTED BY PROF. HENRY G. BELL

The object of this department is to place at the service of our farm readers the advice of an acknowledged expert on all subjects pertaining to soils and crops.

Address all questions to Professor Henry G. Bell, in care of The Wilson Publishing Company, Limited, Toronto, and answers will appear in this column in the order in which they are received.

Space is limited so it is advisable where immediate reply is necessary that a stamped and addressed envelope be enclosed with the question, when the answer will be mailed direct.

C. P.: At what stage should a mixture of oats and peas be cut for hay?

Answer: Peas and oats should be cut just as the oats are beginning to shoot, in order to make the best mixture of hay. In feeding this to horses you will have to be very careful, since this feed is relatively rich in protein. If you overfeed your horses with this constituent of food they will tend to develop kidney trouble unless they are at continuous heavy work.

H. H.: I am plowing three acres that is mostly light sand. I have asked several farmers about it and some say one thing and some another. One farmer told me that if I would put twenty pounds of vetch and one bushel of oats to the acre, any time this month, it would make good hay. Does this make good hay for horses; if not, what would you advise me to do so that vetch make good cow feed?

Answer: An exceedingly good fertilizer for currant and raspberry bushes? One is carrying 3 to 5 per cent ammonia and 10 to 12 per cent available phosphoric acid. Apply this at the rate of 400 lbs. to the acre along the spaces between the bushes and canes, and work it in, by cultivation

A. J. C.: Can you tell me how to get rid of poison ivy and quack grass?

Answer: The first part of your question is answered above.

It is very difficult to get rid of quack grass in any other way than by summer following the land that is affected. The quack grass land will still be fall-plowed so as to turn the roots and root stalks up to the sun and frost. This should be followed in every spring by discing and harrowing every two or three weeks so that the root stalks will get a chance to make a firm attachment again. Each time the field is harrowed it will be well to go over it with a hay rake gather together the root stalks so that they can be dried and burned.

Some men find it good practice to follow this treatment by growing a smother crop the following year, such as rape or buckwheat, seed it by the Roman method, then when it grows, it will give a heavy yield in order that the growth may completely cover the ground. This smother crop out any remaining stems which may have been missed.

as being before God, and before the Jewish

Though subject to Rome, these Jewish measure of freedom and self-government.

Paul must have been impressed by the spirit of the martyrs Stephen and James which he heard, and by the heroic his death. He must have met and heard the testimony of many other carried on his work of fierce persecuheart, an unexampled display of power.

The experience could only be had from the work of God; for it gave him what he had long been seeking—rest of soul, peace of conscience, a free life, and independence. Paul's great decision was made then and in the days that followed.
