Christmas Carol

Hovering o'er with their snowy wings unfurled, When all the earth seemed sleeping, Their voices drift to the weary world,

Where shepherds their watch were keeping, And the shepherds heard those bright angels sing, The song that proclaimed a Babe a King.

See the great star shining, so wondrous bright, So pure in its radiant glory, Go follow its journey and mark its flight, (So the angels told the story), To you glad tidings of peace we bring, Go hasten now to your Christ and King.

So they left their flocks and they went their way, As told by those angel voices: The manger they reached where the man child lay, (Hark! the wise men now rejoice), Then their precious gifts at His feet they fling, They knew that the Babe was their Christ and King.

It was long, long ago, in Bethlehem. In a manger He was lying, But He died for us, as He died for them, His atonement satisfying, And His voice now bids all His angels sing, Come, hasten now to your Christ and King.
