No Appetite

Nervous exhaustion leads to distaste for food. The nerves of the stomach are weak, digestion fails and you become generally upset and out of sorts.

The secret of complete restoration is in getting the nervous system fully built up.

Mrs. R. Cheney, 208 Richmond St., Chatham, Ont., writes:

"I was troubled with indigestion, which caused me many sleepless nights. I would be in terrible distress at times, and would get no relief for two or three hours. For sixteen months I ate nothing but Shredded Wheat biscuits as I dare not eat anything else. I did not know what to do as I had tried so many different remedies, as well as doctors' medicines, without gaining permanent relief. Finally I got some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and while on a second box noticed that I was improving. I continued the treatment until I am now fully restored and have returned to my regular diet. My husband has also taken Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with splendid results. We are glad to recommend it to others."

The chairman read a nicely worded address and the women presented the worthy pair with a nice couch hammock. The reply was full of love and good feeling for the people of Priceville and vicinity. The address will likely be published in some of the local papers.

Some famous fiction authors, previous to composing, stimulate their dark-brown imaginations by hypodermic aid. But deducting our conclusions from the chimerical essay, of the Cherry Grove Cor., number two and a half last week, they were evidently under the influence of a more potent preparation than a poppy product when they trooped up their little night-mare into the limelight. But notwithstanding the fact that it was composed while suffering from one of those terrible jazzy spasms induced by an overdose of home brew, it is generally conceded to be a marvellous demonstration of "magniloquence." And now, if we can keep our classical cloven on the joy wagon till fall fair time, we will have a good thing in the monstrosity line to put on exhibition in the monkey department.
