

CONSERVATIVES LEAD IN BRITISH ELECTIONS WITH MAJORITY OF EIGHTY

A despatch from London says:—Following is the standing of the various political parties in the next British House of Commons. There are still ten seats, the results of which will be announced later, namely, some of the universities and distant scattered Scottish constituencies from which the results may not be available before Saturday:

| Number of seats | 615 |
|-----------------------|-----|
| Seats heard from | 605 |
| Conservatives | 343 |
| Labor | 136 |
| Liberals | 62 |
| Georgians | 49 |
| Other groups | 15 |
| To be announced later | 10 |

A despatch from London says:—The long drawn out fight between mostly 80 former Premier Lloyd George and Sir George Younger has ended with the outstanding feature of the election being the chairman of the Unionists. The Coalition Liberals at the party's annual meeting which only 49 members. There will be many snubbed the Coalition and send Lloyd regrets among the former Premier's supporters into the wilderness on the contention that the country was ripe for advice of some of his well-wishers and retire for a time entirely from the firm belief that the nation had supported their conviction by the Asquithian Liberals improved their position, rising from thirty-four in the old Parliament to sixty-two in the new. We hardly elections have been held, although it failed to fulfill the radius of selfish interest they will have none of it.

The confidence has been amply as they expected, but they did not do so well tested. In the last Parliament, with almost the highest party entertainment, the party's enthusiasm, has done exceedingly well, rising from 76 to 136 seats. It did in 1918 in a wave of enthusiasm to Lloyd George, to the new Parliament Premier had made a major capital levy.

TURKS SNEAK INTO CONSTANTINOPLE

Strengthen Their Position Daily.—Presence of Allies Prevent Massacre.

A despatch from Constantinople says:—The Turks have been extremely wary of the Turkish police, but the Turkish police, however, have not been able to exert themselves, and the British and French have been unable to watch the situation, and the British forces are over 20 miles long and only 10 miles wide at the narrowest point, very close for small forces to cross unobserved, and are able to strengthen daily, while the Allies are not.

The British control of Constantinople has been especially a difficult task, because the French and British wanted to go beyond the boundaries of the Mudros armistice, and the British were then in a military occupation.

This fact has been well known, and probably only to the British, because it was not until after the armistice that the British and French forces were able to enter the city.

However, the British forces have been unable to enter the city, and the British and French forces have been unable to enter the city.

However, the British and French forces have been unable to enter the city.
