proof. So with decide but to the time—the became a man and took upon himself the task of earning money for the family.

He went to learn a trade in an iron foundry, where fumes and hard work untermined a weak system and sowed future, trouble. Now and then one other working member of the family would cease earning through sickness or loss of job, and George would have to keep his nose to the grindstone a few more lours each day to make up for it. His life was just work, work, work, until one day he dropped on the fidor. The company physician, who examined him, prescribed a year or two at the Muskoka. Hospital for Consumptives. He can't inderstand why he never had a boyhood and note of the good things of life, but he's fairly bappy—he knows separation from his family safeguards hom. Ho's content, and he still has hope.
