

LATEST DECISION OF FRANCO-BELGIAN LEADERS INCREASES COMPLICATIONS

A despatch from Brussels says: An order of the Belgian High Commission authorizing the allies to seize the customs receipts, etc., in the State for its arrears of the war tax was promulgated yesterday by the Ruler, General Diaz, as Military Governor of the district, at the same time as it was published in the rest of the Rhineland.

In investigating this lastly, for the greatest step the Allies can take, the French and Belgians have gone. It alters the whole situation in the Rhineland, and leads to an all the ordinary revenue of a large portion under the Treaty of Versailles. The application of such a result will be the result of the most violent and far-reaching recent events in the Rhineland. The Commission in Paris, for what it effects, will be established.

One of the first steps taken by the German side has been the calling of the Reichstag, convened at Mayence, and the opening of all front and rear ports to the Allies. The Reichstag, again following back also to the original plan of the eastern front, but in a very different way, has taken a series of measures, including, of course, the payment of reparations, and the introduction of a new fiscal system. The new fiscal system, however, has been so much delayed, and so many difficulties have arisen in the straight ahead, and the whole thing has been, including the Ruler, Diaz, as Military Governor of the district, at the same time as it was published in the rest of the Rhineland.

BRITISH BRIDE FOR PRINCE ALBERT

The engagement announced by the King of His second son, Prince Albert, Duke of York, to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore, gives general satisfaction because of her British birth. Lady Elizabeth was one of Princess Mary's bridesmaids, and it is said that the romance began at the wedding. She is twenty-two years of age, clever, high-spirited and an accomplished hostess. Her home is Cliveden Castle, framed in history of Alcester. The Prince is an officer in the flying corps, and was present in Britain's ship at the Battle of Jutland.

Rheims Statues Occupying Experts in Restoration

A despatch from Paris says: Despite the difficulties encountered in obtaining either money or material from Germany for the restoration of the devastated districts, the work is rapidly going ahead. This is exemplified at Rheims, where not only the cathedral has been cleared of all debris but the work of repair is progressing.

Many of the streets have not yet been reached, all attention having been centred on the cathedral. Heories most cases to the fact that the patient, particularly if a child, sleep with his mouth open, instead of breathing through the nose. This causes drooping of the tongue, which lets bacteria into the body, developing tuberculosis in frail systems, as well as chronic enteritis and appendicitis.

Work is proceeding on the nave, which is expected to be ready for services in 1925. The famous stained glass windows, which at the height of the bombardment by the enemy were removed to a cellar, are also being examined, and as soon as the frames are ready, which is expected to be very soon, they will be put back in place.

Mouth Open in Sleep Causes Appendicitis

A despatch from Paris says: Dr. Pierre Robin, head surgeon of the Children's Hospital of Paris, has found a new cause of appendicitis. He attributes most cases to the fact that the patient, particularly if a child, sleep with his mouth open, instead of breathing through the nose. This causes drooping of the tongue, which lets bacteria into the body, developing tuberculosis in frail systems, as well as chronic enteritis and appendicitis.

Dr. Robin has made a report to this effect to the Academy of Medicine and says the remedy is simple, consisting in the frequent examination of children's noses to keep them clear of any possible growths.
