Fundamental Principles of Co-Operative Marketing

By R. D. Colquhoun, B.S.A., Professor of Marketing Economics, Ontario Agricultural College.

ARTICLE V. A co-operative marketing association must have a constitution and by-laws...

1. It ensures volume of business. No co-operative marketing association should begin business until it is able to ensure a sufficient volume of business to ensure economical operation.

2. The contract system. In the organization period a definite objective should be set and unless the objective is attained the organization should not begin operations.

There are two general types of contracts in common use. The first is known as the term contract. It runs for a definite number of years.

The contract of the Ontario Co-operative Dairy Producers' Association is a term contract which is a combination of the two types.
