PRESERVATION OF FOOD

How to Keep Fruit and Vegetables From Spoiling.

All Bacteria Present Must Be Destroyed—Hints on Canning and Sealing, and Also on Drying. Special Ovens—Storing Fruits.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

It is a universally known fact that foods not properly preserved will spoil. They will ferment, decay, putrefy or become moldy. These changes are brought about by the development of bacteria, yeasts and molds on or in the food.

Overheating or freezing will usually kill the living tissue of which the roots are composed, after which they will readily decay as a result of the rapid multiplication of bacteria and molds in the dead tissue.

In the preservation of such vegetables as green peas, beans, asparagus, etc., these are green and juicy and if stored in the fresh condition they will either will or ferment and rot. This fermentation and rotting is due to the development of the bacteria which are present on the vegetables.

So in order to preserve such vegetables in the fresh condition, the bacteria present have to be all killed and all other living tissue must be kept in the fresh condition.

Another method of sterilizing is to give one bottle to the filled sealers for 3-4 hours. This, however, cannot be depended on to give a satisfactory result as the above.

In the storing of such fruits as apples and pears it is essential: 1. To have only sound specimens. 2. To pack carefully without bruising.

Such fruits as strawberries, raspberries, plums, peaches, currants, blueberries, etc., which are soft, cannot be kept any length of time without fermenting or molding unless they are canned.

Barthelme Remarkable In "Tolable David."

How love and adoration in the part of a carefree mountain youth for his big brother lifts him from boyhood to manhood in a single day and causes him to scale insurmountable heights in behalf of his brother is the story which Richard Barthelme's plays to the public in "Tolable David," the star's first picture for Associated First National Pictures, Inc., which is to be shown at the Regent Theatre this Friday and Saturday.

The play, replete with thrilling adventures staged in the mountains of Virginia, is full also of heart thrills wound around simple family life. Mr. Barthelme, as David, reaches the hearts of his audience through his appeal for sympathy for the ideals of the quiet country boy, and he thrills them with the revelation of indomitable courage and tenacity of purpose at the risk of his own life in defending these ideals.

A new-born babe who pulls at the very heart strings with the message his entrance into the world carries, is among the characters. David's dog, his courageous father, tender mother, pitiful sister-in-law whose life is blighted in the tragedy which befalls his heroic brother, all carry the same message.

The touching love theme which runs through the story, below the basis for many a delightful romantic scene, but national in its scope at times, furnishes a beautiful background.

Mr. Barthelme, who appears before the public in his play, gives a sympathetic and understanding portrayal of the youth, "David," which will bring an answering heart throbbing from all who see him.

His play, "Tolable David," was awarded the gold medal by the Playwrights' Magazine, for being the best play produced in any film in 1922.
