Sweet-Scented Flowers for Spring

According to our location, we may be expecting frost any night now, or then the more striking gift of color. It may yet be two weeks or more before winter surely is coming down, and it behooves us to make such preparations as it is useful to further our garden prospects for another year. We can hardly have too much vegetation in the soil of the very, numerous annuals, not omitting the sweet pea, all having their own delicate fragrance. To many, mignonette has no attraction owing to its lack of color, but a few sprays included in the bunch of flowers we may be spending a friend just adds the finishing touch with its delicate and delicious odor.

When making up your list for next year's flower garden, do not fail to include at least a few of the plants named. Where gay colors and fragrance combined are necessary, we like the petunias, phlox, stocks, and the like, but what we want in addition to color and fragrance is a plant that will back up many of the fine old favorites.

THE VERY EARLIEST BLOOMS.
In addition to bulbs for outdoor planting, there are a number which have much to commend them to the flower lover. All bulbous flowers have their own special charms and are much heavier than do those of this country. This is due to the fact that the manure and fertilizers used to the untiring energy displayed in cultivating the soil.

In order that the constituents of the soil shall be made available for the use of plants, it is necessary that they be freshly admitted. Without plentiful supply of oxygen, many plants remain dormant in the soil and are useless to the grower.

When we mention good cultivation, it includes, of course, the important work of hoeing between growing crops, and this is also one of the best means of fighting the ill effects of drought.

COLORS AND FRAGRANCE COMBINED.
If you decide not to sow crop seeds, and have a quantity of fresh manure at your disposal, dig as much of the garden as possible this fall, but let the top of the soil be left in an excellent practice; it gives the soil a chance to do their duty with the underground which is thus brought to the surface, and what is of equal importance, many of the liberating insects will be exposed and killed.

In grandmother's time the garden was not considered complete without its quota of sweetly scented flowers; in the old-world garden of my boyhood days we had huge beds of old-time flowers such as wignettes, ten-week stocks, sweet-smelling hellebores, sweet briar roses and 'ollers that I do not now recall. What a delight the garden was to us all!

It always seems that there is something even more wonderful and subtle about the corners for admitting or letting out the fog—E. G. Storm.

One of the most handy things I have used about the hog lot is a portable fence panel.

Take four six-inch boards, twelve feet long, and place them on ground parallel with each other, the first two four inches apart, five inches between the second and third, and six inches between the third and top boards. Nail a good four-inch strip across at each end flush with ends of plank, then one in the centre. This will make a panel three feet three inches high which stood up on edges. As many of these can be made as desired.

Three of these can be set up in front of the individual hog house at farrowing time to make a pen for the sow until the pigs are large enough to stand in the larger range. The ends of the panels are fastened together where they form the corners, with the ever-ready baling wire, and by nailing a strip on the corners of the hog house the ends of panels can be wired to the house. I have used these panels to excellent advantage where I had five portable hog houses. I set the five houses in a row far enough apart so that one panel would reach from one house to the other, and the five houses were placed far enough from a permanent fence so that one panel would reach from a house to the fence, there by making a partition at each house. The panels were wired to the fence and also to the house by means of a four-inch strip nailed to the house, the edge of strip projecting an inch or more and holes bored through it where I wanted to run my wires. This whole arrangement can be put in place ready to receive the prospective mother in less than two hours' time.

Another great advantage of the portable fence panel is building temporary fences about the hog lot. Just set them up, worm fashion, like we used to build rail fences, and wire them together at the corners, and you have a good fence which only required a few minutes to build. It also has the advantage of being easily opened.

Shipment of Registered Wheat.

Productivity, purity and vitality are looked for in good seed. In account of Canada's northern latitude and rigorous climatic conditions combined with immense tracts of virgin soil, Canadian-grown seed of any kind or variety when planted in southern latitude is known to yield a bigger crop of better quality than does seed of the same kind or variety produced in the southern latitude. Of recent years this phenomenon has been capitalized by potato growers in the South Atlantic States. These growers usually obtain a large portion of their seed potatoes from New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. Grain growers and seed firms from south of the Canadian boundary look for much of their high class seed grain supply.

But not until now has Canadian pedigreed seed found its way in commercial quantities to another continent. This year's crop of registered Marquis wheat, produced by a member of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in Saskatchewan and exported from Montreal.

This variety of wheat is Canadian-bred imported parentage, the price being Hard Red Calcutta from India and Red Fife from Germany. The originator of Marquis, Dr. Chas. E. Saunders, first placed Marquis at the head of Canadian grain crops in 1907. Now 90 per cent of the Canadian spring wheat crop is Marquis. Two years ago it was estimated that 12,000,000 bushels of the United States spring wheat crop belonged to this variety.

PRODUCT OF TWENTY YEARS.
The educational and control work of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, extending back over a period of twenty years, the most promising strains of various kinds have been pedigreed and multiplied in their purity. Superiority of pure-bred seed is obtained and maintained by:

1. Approval and acceptance of varieties based on extensive government station trials for purity and germination by Dominion Seed Laboratories.

2. Careful inspection and scoring of seed fields by trained inspectors.

3. Sowing of seed from approved fields for purity and germination by Dominion Seed Laboratories.

4. Final inspection, grading, marking and sealing of seed at growers' premises or central cleaning plants.

5. Careful recording under restrictive conditions of all eligible seed stocks.

Production of registered seed for the season 1921-22 in the Prairie Provinces amounted to some 80,000 bushels. This amount is not nearly sufficient to meet the demand, and consequently provision is now being made for production of this class of seed in greater volume in order that not only may home requirements be filled, but that the growing demand from foreign countries may be met to some extent.

The Argentine shipment will be followed through the Commercial Intelligence Service Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, and it is expected the performance of this seed in Argentina will be most satisfactory.

RED CLOVER IN NEW ONTARIO.
During recent years red clover seed produced in the Dryden district of New Ontario has been giving exceptional good results wherever used throughout Canada. The findings of this clover in this connection have been confirmed by growing tests carried out at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, and at branch farms elsewhere in the northern latitudes.

The success attained by this seed has created a native demand for it, especially from the better class dairy farmers of Ontario. During the past season the local Co-operative Association of Seed Growers at Odenton, consisting of some seventy active members, obtained and sold for Canadian consumption some $30,000 of clover seed.

When it is remembered that Canadian clover seed imports for the three years ending March 31st, 1922, totalled $2,338,470 lbs., valued at $1,735,095, it is not surprising that Northern Ontario can produce a strain of clover seed infinitely better adapted to Canadian conditions than the imported seed; that the home demand for clover seed is steadily growing; that it will be applied to the clover seed production a golden opportunity yet awaiting Northern Ontario farmers who will seriously undertake this phase of agriculture.

The Normans Used Mustard.
The use of mustard as a relish dates back many hundreds of years. We read that in Norman times it was commonly used in a mixture of honey, wine and vinegar, and doubtless this condiment served an excellent purpose. For in those far-off days people had to eat a great deal more heavily and with less regard for their health than we do today. The mixture containing mustard probably saved the Normans from the usual unpleasant results of over-eating. Mustard is recognized by a great number of people as an excellent antidote for indigestion. Mustard contains certain ingredients that neutralize the indigestible qualities of heavy, fatty meats.
