About the House

KNOW THE REASON.

Every parent follows with great interest each step of development in their children. Baby's first smile, his first step, the first time he lisps "mama" or "papa" are milestones in every mother's and father's life which time cannot efface.

When the child first enters school, this interest in his development naturally follows. But if the child is handicapped by defective vision, disconcerting consciousness are sure to follow. The work at the board clearly, not in his reading, the world becomes hazy. By his extra effort to see more plainly, his soul becomes tired, both mentally and physically.

Inattention will be the first impression the teacher will receive of him, and his fellow pupils will soon consider him stupid, dull or lazy. A child who continues to be benighted in his schoolroom and his playground activities is a real detriment to his progress. It is a common knowledge that children who are benighted are usually the poorest students in the school.

For this reason, parents should be careful to have their child's eyes checked by an optician. If the optician is unable to see anything wrong with the child's eyes, the child may have a latent defect which is only apparent when the child is reading. A child who is unable to read clearly will be unable to do his school work. A child who is unable to read clearly will be unable to do his school work.

HAND BAGS FOR PACKING.

I don't throw away worn soft old hand bags. When packing trunks or suitcases for traveling I use the bags for different things. In one go all my socks, my handkerchiefs, my brushes, and so on. Bags pack better than boxes and are so easy to take out when their contents are needed.

We also use this flour in drop cakes and spice cakes, using our everyday recipes and substituting zepphan flour for the usual flour. It is needless to add that our medicinal uses do not require cathartics or laxatives or remedies for pains in the stomach.—Mrs. J. C.

BABY'S CAP.

Patience and care will be saved if baby's cap is snapped on instead of sewed. In this way they may be taken off and put on in a very short time. I have found a large snap on the cap of the infant better than a small one. L. C. H.

The Hidden Hour

BY J. B. HARRIS-BURLAND

"The ghost?" said Peter's wife, "No, I don't know of any ghost." But she was not at all reassured. The ghostly light, which she had seen, had been so real, so tangible, that she could not believe it was a mere illusion. She had seen a figure, a figure of a man, a man who had been in the room, a man who had been in the room. She had seen a figure, a figure of a man, a man who had been in the room, a man who had been in the room. She had seen a figure, a figure of a man, a man who had been in the room, a man who had been in the room.

Wisdom and Happiness.

The first condition of attaining wisdom and of right living in general is to know one's self, to study human life and to watch one's self here so to speak. When we really know ourself, we speedily discover that most of our troubles, defeats and sufferings are due to our own fault, to our own mistakes, to our own errors. We are the chief makers of our own happiness and of our own misery. We are the chief makers of our own happiness and of our own misery. We are the chief makers of our own happiness and of our own misery.

There is nothing for it but to keep away from Deubury. She said to herself. She had the strength of mind to do that at present. But later on she might not be difficult now, but later on it would be impossible. As one goes nearer and nearer to the centre of a supreme effort to save herself. That might not be difficult now, but later on it would be impossible.
