CHARMING COLORS FOR AUTUMN WEAR.

Color as applied to dress is always an important subject, and the new colors are particularly interesting.

Our favorite stand-bys, navy blue and the darker navy known as "mid-river," have a somewhat formidable rival, or at least a close running mate.

In the numerous brown tones, such as seal, walnut, bronze and the under color of mushroom, all good style for street wear.

Black, too, if you like, for black is an all-round favorite for both street and evening wear.

There are, too, some lovely soft medium blues, grey-browns, gray-greens and a more brilliant and richer green called "shutter green," as well as a richer, more brilliant green, like jade.

Then there are softer greens that recall the cool beauty of a waterfall or the moss of trees.

The Chinese trend in line has touched a responsive note in color, or perhaps it is the other way round.

Colors for evening wear and special occasions are flowerlike in tones and shades of yellow, pink, lavender and dandelion of various shades.

HOW TO BE PLEASINGLY PLUMP.

Sometimes a corpulent lady is heard to say about another woman, "Isn't she a scrawny?" I prefer being overweight to looking like that.

Why worry about underweight? Chiefly because an underweight person has little reserve when attacked by illness.

What are the fattening foods—cereals, fats, cream, sugar, and starchy vegetables. If you add rich sauces, cakes, pastries, and candy to your usual menu, you may gain weight, but you may also have a laxative upset.

Increase the amount of food eaten—two squares of butter instead of one, drink a glass of "half-and-half" instead of milk.

A TIP ON DARNING. Go over your old black stocking darners with some white enamel and glass of milk can have its food value increased by putting a beaten egg into it—or melted milk or chocolate.

MIDDY TIES.

All of my friends admire my little daughter's new middie ties, quite unattractive in their humble origin.

The remnants of long-discarded foulard dress made a lovely tie with large white polka dots on a navy blue background.

Another tie I made was of an old ruffled silk scarf, which was pieced to make a white middie blouse.

Together I felt my rummage in the rag bag had been well worth while.

FADELESS STOCKINGS.

A small spoonful of vinegar in the hot water in which blackstockings are rinsed keeps the stockings from turning either rusty or gray.

The Migration of Salmon.

Vast numbers of salmon run up the rivers of Alaska and the northwest coast of Canada, but very few ever return again to salt water.

They do not spawn in the rivers. Those which escape capture on their way up ascend to the headwaters, where there is usually a lake—perhaps several lakes.

They do not spawn in the lakes. For that purpose they seek streams that flow into the lake at high water.

After a while the young salmon go out into the sea, but when they are small and their parents are ready to catch them, they return again to fresh water until their parents are ready to catch them.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME

This group shows part of a large party of Scotch domestics, who called from Glasgow to Canada on the Canadian Pacific line. "Mont Laurier." These girls are all going out to assured posts in various parts of Canada.

Beatrice and the Rose

BY HONORE WILLISIE.

FART II.

Beatrice at any other time would have noticed Grandfather Edgren's suppressed excitement; but she was so engrossed with her own work that even her father's scolding voice fell on unhearing ears.

It was on the fourth morning after Grandfather Edgren had sent his letter that Beatrice came in to breakfast late, her face flushed, her heavy hair tumbled, her eyes wide with a new joy.

Grandfather Edgren had heard her father's scolding voice fall on unhearing ears.

At length the young man moved forward, Grandfather Edgren gave a start, and held out a welcoming hand. He knew that the answer to his letter had come.
