Putting a Piano Course Within the Reach of All Children

Teachers in Canada and across the border have for many years worked on the principle of class teaching. They have found that whether it be arithmetic, geography, grammar, history or any other subject, the results in class work are far better than in the individual method.

The fact is that the germ that invades the lungs and produces pneumonia works the year round, but we usually meet it in the "pneumonia months" from November to April.

Next to avoiding contagion the most effective way to prevent pneumonia is to keep in good physical condition. Pneumonia loves to wreak its wrath upon the weak and helpless.

It has been found that by this method piano study becomes interesting in the child's eyes. Again, the child has the advantage of the company of the other children in the class where the spirit of childish rivalry spurs on their ambition.

Advantages of New Method. The really new thing is a piano class set up to reach the full advantage of the method of teaching piano. When one adds to that the fact that the course is taught by Mr. Messner, a working knowledge of the piano within reach of the children of the masses instead of confining it to the few who can afford private instruction, it is reasonable to expect that piano classes will become much more general than they now are.

HEALTH EDUCATION

BY DR. J. J. MIDDLETON
Provincial Board of Health, Ontario
Dr. Middleton will be glad to answer questions on Public Health through this column. Address him at Spadina House, Spadina Crescent, Toronto.

Keeping school children up to a normal standard of health and efficiency is an important part of public health work at the present time. One reason for the urgent necessity of this work would seem to be due to the fact that as a rule, very little medical or nursing supervision is given to the school child, and consequently arrives at school age with its physical and mental development, when so many children are already defective at the present time much more than in the past.

Within the past year or two, an attempt has been made in all well-organized health centres, to continue the work of child welfare through the school system. In the early days of the movement, the scope of the work was largely limited to infants and the period from birth to the attainment of

Demand for Bible Proves People's Real Need

At the moment of writing I read in the newspapers that the presses which print the Bible cannot keep pace with the demand. How did this demand arise? What maintains it? Why do people buy and read this ancient book, when they can buy and read so much that is newer, fresher and so on the surface at least, more directly suited to their twentieth-century needs?

Of one thing we can be certain, that unless these books supplied something which the heart of Europe and America craves for its sustenance, no such demand would continue. No where else in history, to my knowledge, do we find a group of people, extremely diverse among themselves, appropriating a whole literature not their own, which they had no part in producing, and living on it as they never live on the most vital works of their own children.

The phenomenon calls attention to itself, and is perhaps its own best explanation. Demand is always in proportion to the quality of the supply. That is all there is in it. There is no mystery in the matter. Where there is that which meets a need, there will be a demand for it.

They are the basic reason for the Bible's vitality—its value. Make the Bible a mere book, and it is dead. It is the living word of God, and it is the power which has made the Bible the most widely read book in the world.
